Ship Strike As Protest

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP) Although the country-wide walk-out by 62,000 seamen of the American Federation of Labor, due to begin at 9 p.m., Frankfurt time, today, is expected to last only a matter of hours, it has posed a new problem in the tense U. S. maritime labor crisis. The purpose of the stoppage, apparently, is to protest against the fact that Pacific ship owners are attending meetings in Washington with CIO leaders, which are being held in an effort to avert the threatened strike set for June 15.

The AFL wanted the owners to return to San Francisco for negotiations with their union.

CIO Backs Seamen

Meanwhile the CIO United Automobile Workers international executive board ended a two-day policysetting session in Cleveland after voting to support maritime workers in their threatened strike and label-ing President Truman the "number one strike-breaker of America" for his methods in trying to avert the shipping tie-up.

The preamble to the unanimouslyadopted resolution asserted the president's action "deprives organized labor of its right to negotiate on equal terms with employers and encourages shipowners to reject the just demands of maritime workers.'

ArmyProbes Mystery at Castle Club

The Stars and Stripes Bureau

FRANKFURT, June 6-The theater provost marshal disclosed here today that a cache of the Hesse-Darmstadt crown jewels, valued at more than $1,500,000, vanished from its hiding place beneath the floor of the Kronberg Castle officers'

The provost marshal said that the jewels, which were known to have included sapphires, emeralds and a string of pearls given as a gift by the late Queen Victoria to her daughter, the then Princess of Hesse, were allegedly buried in a container beneath the floor of the huge castle in October, 1944.

Personnel Redeployed

Although the official report on the appearance established the date of the coffer's removal as Nov. 6, 1945, an Army investigation was not initiated until April of this year, shortly after members of the House of Hesse had reported their loss.

The official investigation, which was completed on April 23, disclosed that all military personnel who might have had knowledge of the buried trove had returned to the United States prior to the discovery of its disappearance.

It was believed that the War Department would continue the inquiry in the United States.

The huge, 80-room Kronberg Castle, 15 miles from Frankfurt, in which the alleged theft took place, was taken over by the Army as an officers' country club in April, 1945.

Servants at the 50-year-old castle, who now operate it for the Army instead of the Hohenzollern owners, were reluctant to talk about the loss of the family jewels, but pointed out a three-foot hole in the stone floor of a subterranean tunnel beneath the rambling building, the alleged hiding place from which the fortune in jewels vanished.

The elderly Countess of Hesse-Darmstadt, one of the owners of the jewels, is a sister of the late Kaiser Wilhelm. She was a Nazi Party member and entertained Adolf Hitler, Hermann Goering and other Nazi leaders at the castle.

Capone Mobs Moving Back Into Chicago

HICAGO, June 6 (INS)—Charges that old Capone mobsters were attempting to muscle into Chicago's lucrative gambling racket and establish a new, nation-wide syndicate were being made openly as police stood by to head off new underworld wars.

An unnamed mysterious figure, variously referred to as "Tubby," or "Tobbo," was said to be directing the venture, which, if successful might corner a $40,000,000 Chicago gambling business. This character has replaced Al Capone as leader.

Informed sources in gangdom said that the only reason the war had not reached the wholesale killing stage now was that Chicago had a new police commissioner, John Prendergast. The commissioner, feared by the underworld, said that he was watching develop-ments "very closely." He added that police were aware that new gang combinations were being formed

1,000 Handbooks

It was reported reliably that there were some 1,000 handbooks and gambling places in Chicago. According to gang sources, the old Capone gangsters have moved into and control 400 of the places, all on the North Side. Some former gambling leaders on the North Side have fled town, reportedly after receiving

The Caponeites, it was alleged, were planning to move into the South Side and take over the remaining 600 places. Such a step, it was stated, would certainly lead to an outbreak of gang violence.

Business men were being caught in the "squeeze." Fred Mandel, merchant sportsman and a member of the Illinois Racing Commission, has been threatened, and he has hired bodyguards. Mandel, as a member of the racing commission, always fought any encroachment by James M. Ragen, 65, a scratch sheet publisher, associated with the Continental News Service which furnishes horse race results, also has been threatened. He escaped an assassination attempt less than a week ago when he fled into a police station after being pursued by two hoods.

New Overlord

Ragen, in statements to Chicago police and the Cook Country states attorney's office, alleged that an old Capone mobster, Humie "Loud-mouth" Levin, was trying to muscle in on the distribution of horse race

Levin is a convicted brothel keeper, former beer collector for the Capone gang, and he once served 15 months for income tax evasion in the same Federal cleanup that sent Capone to prison.

He lives in a luxurious 18th floor apartment on Chicago's gold coast, and has a battery of five telephones to keep in touch with his friends. He has been "holed up" in the apartment since March 29 to escape subpoena servers in a gambling suit

Levin and Jack "Greasy Thumb" Guzik, the latter another ex-Caponeite with a long police record, were said to be the "fronts" for the reformed Capone syndicate. However, the smart talk in gangdom was to the effect that they were merely lieutenants in the struggle for power, and that a new "overlord" has risen in the under-

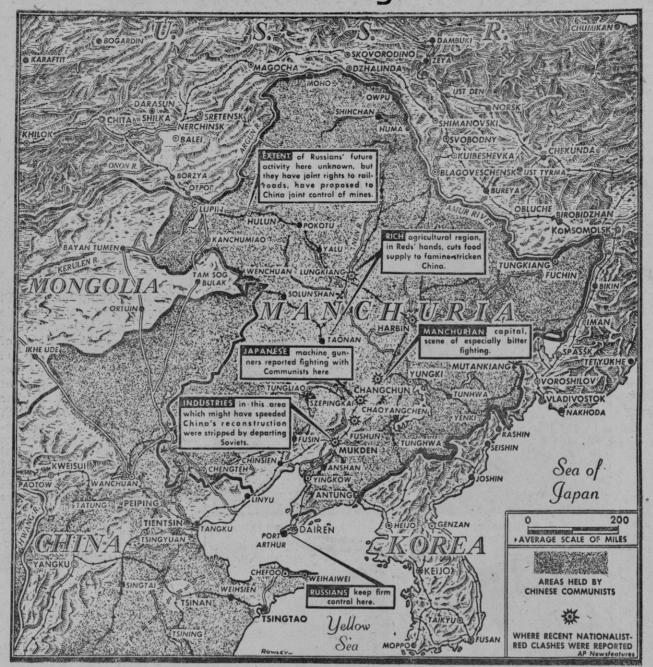

The attempts to organize gambling on the syndicate basis came after gangsters dabbling in black markets during the war found most of their incomes cut off and had to find a new outlet for their somewhat questionable talents.

Manchuria Is Still Battleground of Orient

By John L. Springer

ASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)-China, first of the Allied powers at which World which War II called, seems doomed also to to be the last nation from which it leaves. Events of recent weeks suggest it may be years before unhappy China again sees real peace.

Industries Stripped

Things looked rosey for China after the Japanese surrender last August, when under the announced terms of a treaty with Russia, the Chiang Kai-shek government's claims to Manchuria were recognized and the Soviets were to favor the Nationalists over the Chinese Communists.

Under this agreement as it was revealed, the Russians were to occupy the vital ports of Dairen and Port Arthur jointly and also were to have joint control over key rail-roads. It soon developed that the Soviets were also stripping Man-

Marshall got Nationalists and Reds together in January in what he thought was a truce, and "truce teams" were sent into remote areas to spread the news that fighting had ceased. The plan was to merge both armies gradually under a collaboration government. But the truce fell through and peace now seems as remote as ever.

Chinese Eat Grass

No major country in the world can afford war less than China, which has not known normalcy for a generation. The Communists first began to badger the nationalist government 20 years ago, and opposition continued steadily through the Japanese invasion of Man-churia in 1931 and the fighting in China itself which began in 1937. Clemency Sought

I have read about Sgt. Jones' sentence of six months in the Lichfield case, and the recommendation for clemency. I have been on this trial as witness for seven months, since I was a prisoner at Lichfield.

There are about 10 witnesses here with me who are prisoners, and who have been in confinement for from 10 to 18 months. We were supposed to go before a clemency board within six months after our sentence, but we haven't seen a board of any kind so far. We feel that we have been let down, and justice has not been done us.

Most of us have been in combat, and some of the guys here were taken off the front lines and taken back to Lichfield for trial, and later beaten up by the guards there.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The content of this letter was referred to the Theater Provost Marshal, who replied: "There are at present 11 general prisoners at Bad Nauheim who are witnesses in the Lichfield trials. The writer of the letter is in error in his state-ment that these prisoners should have gone before a clemency board within six months after being sentenced.

"It is a definitive War Department policy to CON-SIDER each general prisoner for clemency within six months after his trial, and annually thereafter, but there is no requirement that the prisoner appear before a clemency board. Such consideration has been given each of the 11 general prisoners concerned.

"Specifically, a special clemency board was appointed by the London Area office in April to study the cases of those general prisoners being held as Lichfield witnesses. As a result of this action, five of the general prisoners were restored to duty. Russia, France Threaten Peace, Franco Tells UN

Committee Report | Austin to Succeed Called an Insult

MADRID, June 6 (AP)-Russia and France are accused by the Franco government of being a threat to the peace of Spain, in a 3,000-word reply to the United Nations Security Council's subcommittee report, issued early this morning.

Spain would rather live in "sacrificing isolation" than submit to interference in its internal affairs, declared the report, and characterized the report, and characterized the report of the second report to the report of the second report to the report report to the report of the second report report report to the report subcommittee's statement to term. the United Nations as "a dialectical piece charged with political passion."

The Franco government asserted that the United Nations has no competence or jurisdiction to consider Spain's affairs,

The note said that Spain today defends the cause of the middle powers, neutral nations and small countries, "all of which must feel threatened by the same danger if now they do not oppose the injustice of this attempt to crush national

Denies Axis Compromise

The Franco regime also again denied that it compromised with the Axis, and that it was a Nazi-Fascist government.

While denying the right of the United Nations to pass judgment on Spain, the Franco government said was unable to remain silent in the face of the subcommittee's offensive report which was an insult, and it deplored the fact that the new society of nations, instead of serving the cause of accord between peoples, should have incited a new quarrel against one of the few nations which remained neutral during the war.

The note protested that, while denying Spain membership in the United Nations, they usurped the right to judge her conduct, and pointed out that only one of the nations on the subcommittee maintained relations with Spain—Brazil.

Trial Called Partial

France and Poland were at the same time judge and accuserviolation of the elementary principle of impartial trial, the note said.

'Both Russia, the mandator of Poland, and France, beside being a threat to the peace of Spain are themselves before the United Nations not for mere suppositions, but for real facts—aggression against Iran and frontier incidents with Siam respectively."

With regard to the charge of aiding the Axis in South America, it was noted that no Latin America. ican country complained in reply to the subcommittee's questionnaire.

Terms Attitude Neutral

The Spanish attitude to German residents and property was irre-proachable and could be favorably compared with that of other neutral countries, it was added.

An attempt to punish a nation just because it was feared that it might contain seeds of a possible future threat, the note declared, constituted a grave and surprising juridical novelty.

The note concluded with an appeal to the Anglo-Saxon nations and to Brazil, The Netherlands and Egypt, to study Spanish affairs objectively and to judge them serenely and without passion.

German States To Get Power

FRANKFURT, June 6 (UP)-Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, deputy military governor, directed German minister presidents of the American zone to make provisions in preliminary drafts of state constitutions for the ceding of federal powers to the Landerrat (council of states) in the absence of a central German government.

Clay said in a press conference later that the policy of not making the Landerrat a super-zonal government was unchanged.

"However, we have never overlooked the possibility that a central German government might not be established."

Observers pointed out that this was the first official admission that the Landerrat was designed to be anything more than a zonal coordinating body acting as a stop-gap until a central government was established as required under the Potsdam Declaration terms.

Churchill Says Soviet Curtain Hides War Seed

LONDON, June 6 (AP)-Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee and his wartime predecessor, Winston Churchill, shelved domestic differences today and united in measured criticism of Soviet Russia.

"Not only has a curtain descended from the Baltic to the Adriatic," said Churchill, "but behind that is a broad band of territory containing nearly one-third the population of Europe, apart from Russia. It is here that the seeds of a new world war are being sown."

Attlee, expressing full support of Foreign Secretary Ernest L. Bevin -who yesterday accused Russia of obstructing the way to peace-said difficulties were attributable to Moscow's insistence on a rigid and literal interpretation of the Potsdam agreement, denying all flexibility.

The debate, which came on the second day of a two-day review of British foreign policy, brought one shaft of optimism from Attlee:

"I do not believe," he said, "the we should judge the present state of the world wholly pessimistically. I believe, in the overcoming of our difficulties, no one will play a greater part than Mr. Bevin."

'Ganging Up' Denied

Churchill deplored what he termed the Russian attitude that any agreement between Britain and the United States was a "ganging up' against the Soviet Union.

Said Attlee: "I entirely agree that friendship with neighbors is not 'ganging up', but I would also say this—we don't want in any way to get an exclusive friendship with the Western Powers. We are out to get an all-inclusive friendship."

Churchill declared it was incredible that "the handful of very able who rule from the Kremlin should be so ill-informed concerning the Western Democracies, and cried: "It cannot be in the interests of Russia to go on irritating the United States. States. There is no people in the world which is slower in developing hostile feelings against a foreign country than the Americans.

Want Speedy Peace

Britain could not agree to indefinite postponement of peace treaties, Churchill continued.

"The idea of keeping millions of people hanging about in a sub-human state will only breed moral pestilence and probably active war," he said.

Demanding support of the United Nations, Churchill declared: in this world organization that we must put our final hope."

But Attlee asserted: "We don't want to accept the counsel of despair that would divide Europe into two

21,000 to March in London Victory Parade

By JOE RABINOVICH Staff Writer

LONDON, June 6-London, currently undergoing a straightening out at the seams and a slow carpentering into shape for Saturday's mammoth victory celebration, is once more a sea of strange faces in strange uniforms.

Strangely-garbed newcomers have made their appearance - shakoed Palestine police, South Africans in plumed felt hats, Scotsmen in kilts and red-beribboned socks, men and women from such weird-sounding stamp collector's places as Bechuanaland, Basutoland, Swaziland, all in the British empire.

On Saturday, these, plus home-island troops and representatives of the Allies, will form part of a threeand-a-half-mile motorized column and two-and-a-half-mile marching column in an immense parade which will epitomize the British people's formal recognition that the war is

Ten million persons from all over the British Isles, are expected to mass along downtown London's sidewalks to watch the procession, which will be headed by a state landau

The sidewalk gazers, the plain ordinary citizens who bore the brunt of the war, will have a large representation among the 21,000 marchers following the royal family. Nurses, air-raid wardens, land army women, farmers, rescue workers, and others who worked valiantly on the home front when it was an actual battle front, will march with the Heading the 510-vehicle motorized column will be Britain's wartime chiefs of staff and top Allied commanders. In front, Field Marshall Viscount Alan-Brooke, former chief of the Imperial General Staff, and Admiral of the Fleet Lord Cunningham, former naval commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean and first lord of the admiralty, will ride side by side.

Directly behind them will follow Field Marshal Viscount Alexander, Lord Portal, chief of the Royal Air Force, Adm. Lord Louis Mountbatten, former over all Allied Southeast Asia commander, and Field Marshall Lord Maitland Wilson, chief British representative on the combined chiefs of staff board in Washington.

The procession will be sprinkled with the gold and braid of five field Marshals, 41 generals, 20 air marshals and 40 admirals, representing, in addition to Britain and the United States, 26 Allies, dominions and colonies

The United States will be represented too, by one platoon each from the Army, Navy and Marine Corps in the marching column. U.S. flyers, 25 from the Army and 25 from the Navy, will march with the RAF contingent.

Perhaps the most spectacular feature of the day will be the RAF "Fly Past." As the columns below turn eyes left toward the royal saluting point at Marlborough gate on the Mall in St. James Park, 300 warcraft —among them heavy Halifax and Lancaster bombers, the familiar Spitfires, the new postwar 660-miles-an-hour jet-propelled Gloucester Meteors and Vampires-will dip low

British Arrest 35 Youths in Nazi Revival

LUNEBURG, June 6 (UP)-British authorities disclosed that they had broken up a serious Nazi youth movement in the Luneburg district which centers around Heinrich Himmler's secret grave in the Luneburg area.

About 35 youths, ranging in age up to 26 years, were arrested three weeks ago and British military authorities took so serious a view of their activities that they referred the prisoners to a higher tribunal. Painted Swastikas on Walls

The British prosecutor said it had been known to British authorities for months that a subversive movement existed in the area. Posters were frequently found which pointto this fact, swastikas were painted on walls and windows of Communist Party offices were continually broken.

The organization was known as RANA—Radical Nationalists—and aimed at forming a resistance group against the occupying powers, and to carry on unrest among the local population.

The movement further aimed at undermining youth organizations approved by Military Government.

LONDON, June 6 (AP)-Field Marshal Lord Wavell, present viceroy of India and formerly commander of British forces in the Middle East, blamed the British war cabinet for the result of the Somaliland offensive by the Italians in August, 1940.

His dispatch, filed a month after

Lord Wavell said that the cabinet policy in 1939 and 1940 "resulted in long delays in the arrival of reinforcements, withholding of money necessary for defenses and refusal to allow measures to be taken to establish a proper intelligence system for fear of impairing relations with Italy."

The Colonial Office, he said, kept control of Somaliland troops until January, 1940, and clung to the administrative control of the protectorate until 10 days before Mussolini entered the war.

Congress Faces Fight Over Teen-Age Draft

Senate Votes To Register Men 18 to 45

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)-The House and Senate braced for a tug of war over resuming the teen-age draft. But there were hints of compromise—making 19-year-olds eligible and exempting those of 18.

The Senate pushed the question toward a showdown when it gave a 69-8 majority to the bill for keeping the main provisions of the wartime draft act in force until next

The major provisions of the legislation extending selective service until May 15, 1947, passed by the Senate and sent to the House:

1-Principal sections of the wartime draft act were extended, including re-employment benefits.

2-Men between 18 and 45 years must register and be subject to call. This would eliminate the present exemption for 18 and 19-year-olds forced by the House into the stopgap extension which expires July 1.

3—Size of the armed forces fixed for July 1 and the year following with inductions limited to numbers required above voluntary enlist-ments. Army limits are 1,550,000 at the end of this month, and 1,070,000 a year later. The Navy limit for both dates 558,000, and Marines 108,000.

4-All inductions of fathers or men with a dependent child halted Aug. 1. All inductees in this class who request it will be released.

5-On Oct. 1 all present inductees with 18 months service or longer may request release. Service of all future inductees is limited to 18

6-Men who served overseas for six months exempted from reinduction. 7-Pay increases granted for enlisted personnel. 8—Special deferments given scientists and scientific students.

9—Selective service will expire May 15, 1947, unless ended sooner by Congress. Records will be transferred to other Federal agencies. Major provisions of the House-approved legislation include: 1-Extension of the draft only to

2—Prohibition against induction of 18 and 19-year-olds.

3—Suspension of all inductions from May 15 until Oct. 15, 1946, to permit trial of the voluntary system. A broader pay increase was voted in a separate bill covering officers as well as enlisted men.

GIs Were Used For Targets, Court Is Told

DACHAU, June 6 (AP)-Helpless American prisoners were shot from the rear after being cold-bloodedly lined up by SS troops as stationary targets for small-arms practice, a defendant in the War Massacres trial here confessed today.

T. Rauh, a veteran of the SS
Hitler Lifeguard division, testified that he and his comrades selected seven or eight Americans at a time carefully spaced them two yards apart in a Belgian wood, then killed them from a distance of less than

"We took turns firing," Rauh's sworn statement declared. "We made them face the other way, because if they had seen that we aimed at them, they would have moved and offered a bad target. I fired a single shot. It hit an American in the back of the head."

Machine gunner Friedel Kies, another of the 74 SS defendants accused of atrocities during the Battle of the Bulge, admitted that his unit took no chance that any American might survive and sprayed with heavy fire a pasture near Englesdorf, Belgium, where 50 to 60 enemy soldiers apparently lay dead.

Italians Talk Of Toscanini, Aged Orlando

ROME, June 6 (AP)—While Italy settled down to being a republic today, Queen Marie and her four children sailed from Naples and speculation rose high on who will be the president of Italy, with Vittorio Emanuel Orlando, Arturo Toscanini and Ivanoe Bonomi suggested as

The queen sailed on the Duke of Abruzzi bound for Gaeta, where she expects to be joined by Umberto, possibly later today. The Abruzzi is the same ship that took King Victor Emanuel III into exile last month.

Orlando, 86, was widely mentioned as the likely candidate for president as the nation prepared formally to proclaim the downfall of the kingdom.

Could Unite Italy

Orlando, last surviving member of the Big Four of Versailles, was being proposed as a compromise candidate, it was said, because as a Sicilian he could bridge the schism shown at the polls by the industrial north, which voted Republican, and south, which supported the House

Another "venerable old man" of Italian politics, Ivanoe Bonomi, 78, who led two provisional governments during most of Italy's cobelligerency, was also being suggested as president. His supporters said he was less of a monarchist than Orlando and therefore more suitable for the new regime. (International News Service reported that Toscanini has the greatest chance of becoming the first president should the president be elected by popular vote, according to a majority of Italo-American leaders and diplomats.)

recovery from the Krupp files in Essen of a letter, signed by Wirth, to Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach All this has been discovered by the Halbach.

Written in 1940

The letter was written in 1940, after the fall of France, and referred to the years 1920 to 1923, "when we both laid the new foundations for the development of German armament technique with the help of your great and most important firm."

hint of things to come was contained in a later reference to a government statement, issued through the German ambassador in Paris in 1938, that publicity on Germany's earlier preparations for regaining national freedom was not desirable.

"There is no reason to do that, considering the grave battle decision ahead of us," Wirth wrote.

Further light was thrown on the secret financial aid in a confidential memorandum by one of Krupp's staff, which was found attached to Wirth's letter.

The memorandum said that Wirth put 12,000,000 pounds worth of marks at Krupp's disposal at Mendelssohn and Company of Berlin. The money was then transferred to an account carried under the name "Custodia" at a Dr. Mannheimer's in Amsterdam.

Ghosts Stalk Normandy Beach, Veteran of Invasion Finds

By G. K. HODENFIELD

Former Stars and Stripes Correspondent POINTE DU HOE, Normandy, be washed away by the pounding

June 6 (AP)- At 0640 on June 6, 1944, 263 gallant men of the 2nd Ranger Bn. landed at Pointe du Hoe, and for three days fought the fiercest battle of the entire invasion of Northern France.

When, on the afternoon of the third day, reinforcements arrived from the right flank, there were only 58 men still able to leave the cliffs of Pointe du Hoe under their own power. Of the 58, at least six were wounded.

As a "spare part," as they termed it, the Rangers were carrying this writer, then a reporter for The Stars and Stripes.

This week I went back to Pointe du Hoe. It was saddening and a little frightening. Perhaps a return to any battlefield where you have lost friends is saddening and surf Sitting on the edge of the cliffs, looking toward an England that was too distant to be seen, I remembered how it was that day-that cold and miserable June 6, 1944.

We started the bobbing trip from the transport at 0400. Ahead of us were the cliffs of Pointe du Hoe and six German artillery pieces, heavily casemated, that dominated the entire invasion beaches. These guns were "Target No. 1." and the job of the Rangers was to put them out of Here was the problem: The guns were situated on the cliffs that utted in to the channel in a huge 'V." The Germans faced inland. The Germans thought that not even "military idiots," (Hitler's characterization of Allied leaders) would attempt a frontal assault of the cliffs. The guns were secure under 16 feet of concrete.
