Sir R. M. Anderson on the War.

Melbourne, 24th July.

Infected Shaving Brushes.

The Customs Minister, Mr. Jensen, has decided to issue an order prohibiting the importation of brushes of Asiatic origin without a certificate from the health authority of the country of origin that the hair is free from disease. A case is reported from Western Australia that a man has died from anthrax, which has been traced to a shaving brush. A consignment of brushes from Japan has been detained in Sydney and examined. One brush was definitely found to be infected with anthrax. Others contained organisms of dangerous diseases.

The Sydney Raid on the I.W.W.

Sydney, 24th July.

Fuller particulars of the police raid of the I.W.W. Headquarters in Sydney show that a meeting attended by six hundred persons, men, women and a few children, was progressing when the police entered. A proclamation under the War Precautions Act was read, and all present were searched. There was little resistance, and some denied being connected with the I.W.W. Cartloads of documents and books containing the names and addresses of active members were seized. Revolvers and slingshot were also found. Tom Barker, the chairman of the meeting, was escorted home to Darlinghurst, and his rooms searched, where books and papers were seized. It is believed that the raid will facilitate further action by the police.

Mr. Hughes and Russia.

Melbourne, 27th July.

Mr. Hughes, referring to Russia's position, at a dinner to the inter-state delegates of the Dairying Conference, said he had hope that there would shortly arise in Russia the man who, on great occasions, was seldom called for in vain. All who loved liberty and the Empire and wished Australia well, would pray that M. Kerensky might be given by God strength to marshal the forces of that great country in the fight for freedom in the forefront which he stood.

Mr. Brookfield's Case.

Sydney, 27th July.

Mr. Percival Brookfield, M.L.A., of New South Wales, who was fined £50 for making a speech detrimental to recruiting on March 25th, stated the only flag he recognised was the red flag. He would not spill a drop of blood for the Union Jack. Stop-work days on the mines were instigated as well, as a protest against the prosecution of Mr. Brookfield, and a series of mass meetings held.

Mr. Hughes, replying to Mr. Considine, in the House of Representatives, said that as a citizen he had often wondered why Mr. Brookfield was not prosecuted sooner. Probably the present case was under the State Laws. He was not aware that Mr. Brookfield had been treated unjustly. He would see that justice was given to him, but certainly he did not deserve mercy. He was not surprised that the men at Broken Hill ceased work: he would be surprised if they went long without stopping. When Mr. Considine had been longer in Parliament he would know that these rumblings that disturbed him so greatly did not affect the Ministry or Parliament.

It is stated that Great Britain paid over 24,000,000 sterling for the Australian wool clip of 1916-17. Acting on representations from the growers, Mr. Hughes is now offering to sell to the Imperial Government about 120,000 cases of dried apples at the price of 7d. per lb.

Barden concussion of the brain and fractured skull. Of the others, Maxwell had fractures to head and leg; Crockett a fractured nose; Wood a broken collar-bone; O'Connor cuts on the face and fractured skull.

Melbourne, 30th July.

D. G. Black, of the South Yarra Club, has won the Metropolitan Rifle Clubs Association Championship, at Port Melbourne, on Saturday, with a score of 96.

Sydney, 30th July.

Fred Kay, 10st. 9lb., beat Fritz Holland, 11st. 6lb., at Sydney Stadium, in twenty rounds, after a clean and clever fight.

Swallowed an Orange.

A cow belonging to Mr. E. Jenner, of Tuckurimba, met with a queer experience. After being milked she strayed over to an orange tree and treated herself to some fruit. Later on she was noticed to be in pain and greatly swollen. Various remedies were resorted to, but without any relief being obtained. The beast was so bad that she was unable to lie down. After 32 hours' suffering she coughed or vomited up a medium sized green orange, which she had swallowed whole.

Solicitor Struck Off the Rolls.

In the Banco Court, on May 10th, the Chief Justice gave his reserved decision in an application made on behalf of the Victorian Law Institute that the name of Arthur James Mollison, solicitor, of Collins Street, Melbourne, be struck off the rolls. The complaint was that in 1913 Mollison advised a client named Elizabeth Lockey Jackson, of Armadale, to invest £791 by way of mortgage on certain land at Blackwarry, stating that the money advanced would form a second mortgage, whereas in fact the security was only a fourth mortgage, and the client lost her money.

The Chief Justice said the application to strike Mollison off the rolls would be granted, but he would be given leave, at the end of two years, to apply to be reinstated. He would also have to pay the costs.

Australian Military Plumes.

When did the Australian military custom of wearing feather-plumes in the hat originate? When the Queensland Mounted Infantry Squadron that was sent out West at the time of the big shearing strike 25 years ago returned, some of the men sported emu plumes; but the first to appear on parade in Brisbane wearing them was carpeted. However, the C.O. had another inspection, and said, "H'm—looks rather well," or words to that effect, and the plumes were multiplied till there was one in every Q.M.I. hat. On the Commonwealth taking over the States' several pocket-armies, the Q.M.I. was merged in the Australian Light Horse, but the Bananaland units still put the letters (in brackets) after their official designation, and are prepared to fight anyone who tries to snatch their plumes away. I am aware that the N.S. Wales Lancers—and, possibly, other mounted units as well—wore feathers a good while back, but I fancy the Bananalanders were the first to adopt this kind of head decoration.—"X.P.D.," in "Sydney Bulletin."

Bulk Handling of Wheat.

"The Globe," Sydney, says that one of the best arguments in favour of the bulk handling of wheat has been furnished by the mice which are ruining hundreds of thousands of pounds' worth of the grain, not in one State only, but wherever wheat is in the stack in the Commonwealth.

The ex-Sydney performer Thrace is reported as shaping well in his schooling lessons over the jumps, and a win for him over the hurdles in the near future is something more than a probability.

On Empire Day.

By Members of the A.I.F.

In a prize competition to celebrate Empire Day (the late Queen Victoria's birthday), promoted by Mr. T. Henley, M.L.A., and the Australian Comforts Fund, a large number of compositions were received from members of the A.I.F. The judges awarded the first prize to the acrostic verses on "Advance, Australia!" and from those submitted to us we select three other pieces for publication:—

A. Australian soldiers, fighting the foe,
D. Doing their duty wherever they go;
V. Volunteers—tall and grand,
A. Australia's pick from the old home land.
N. Nobly and grandly they answer the "Call,"
C. Caring nought, if they live or fall.
E. England is proud of you, one and all.

A. Advance, Australia! you hear the call;
U. United we stand, divided we fall;
S. Shoulder to shoulder we always stand,
T. To keep up the name of the 'Southern' land.
R. Remember, lads, our glorious name;
A. Always keep it free from shame.
L. Let every man keep playing the "game."
I. In summer, in winter, the hardships
 you bear,
A. "Australians, brave!" you're doing your share.

Pte. D. J. GRAVES.

Our Empire, in these days of strife,
 Still trusts in Thee, Thou Fount of Life;
 Be Thou our shield, be Thou our stay,
 On this our yearly Empire Day.

Grant us success, if it be Thy will,
 And in the minds of men instil
 A longing for the era when
 "Peace reigns on earth, goodwill to men."

No. 6446, N. Batt.

It is, in truth, a simple-sounding name,
 Yet what a gloried halo round it shines!
 We've made for it an all-enduring fame;
 We've gave it wealth unfound in seas or mines.

For what it means we gave our lives—our love;
 Our homes, our children, and the years
 to be;
 Our dread of Hell, our hope for Heaven
 above;
 "Hail! Empire Day"—the dawn of Unity!

Sport after the War.—Bombing Tunny in the Lagoons at Bude.
 Drawn by W. HEATH ROBINSON, in "Sketch."

This is the Natal Day the Empire far flung keeps
 In memory of one who ever lives—yet sleeps.
 'Tis not for pomp and pride, her memory
 we revere,
 But for the life she led, we hold that memory dear.
 Her heart would fill with pride, if she
 to-day
 Could hear the answer to her call, her far
 Dominions say:
 "To our last man and shilling will we go,
 To share Old England's danger—to fight
 Old England's foe!"

S. G. ADAMSON.

A Mysterious Wreck.

A report was received on May 10th by the Department of Navigation from the pilot at Port Macquarie, on the north coast, to the effect that Mr. Baker, a resident, had sighted what appeared to be a sunken wreck. The vessel, from the description supplied to the pilot, was lying submerged south of Crescent Head, with the top of the funnel and a mast showing. The wreck was situated about one mile from the shore. The department has instructed the pilot to investigate the matter, and a further report is anxiously awaited.

One Thousand Days—The Anzac Record.

Gaba Tepe to Messines.

By C. E. W. BEAN.

France—July 27.

It is 1,000 days to-day since the first Australian and New Zealand convoy for the war in Europe left the last Australian port. It cleared its homelands within three months of the outbreak. It consisted of an Australian Division (wisely named the First), the 1st Australian Light Horse Brigade, and the New Zealand Infantry Brigade and New Zealand Mounted Rifle Brigade. The two forces have since grown into an army larger than that originally despatched by Britain. The British authorities do not regard them as an army, but their own countries do; they are an army in sentiment and, to that extent, in fact.

Within five months of sailing, this new force, the Australian and New Zealand Army Corps, under Sir William Birdwood, was thrown against an appallingly difficult coast. It seized a triangle of mountain-side—its main front on the second ridge inland, its base on the beach. It held the front through three long days, the 1st Australian Division losing about half its strength, till the Turkish attacks wore out. The position was called by the initial letters of the corps' name—Anzac.

After the landing only one more offensive was made from Anzac. The whole effort was concentrated from Helles. Two Anzac brigades, one Australian, one New Zealand, went to Helles to reinforce. They formed the centre of the attack on Krithia on May 8th. They lost half their reduced strength, but reached and dug the "Redoubt Line," where in eight months only 500 yards more were gained.

An Immortal Charge.

The one offensive from Anzac was made in August, 1915, when the British landed at Suvla. It involved the bloodiest fight Australians had fought, the taking of Lone Pine, and the immortal charge of the Light Horse at the Nek. But the main offensive was that of the New Zealanders and 4th Australian Infantry Brigade up the tangled spurs of Sari Bair. The New Zealand Mounted Rifle Brigade at Hill 60 finished with 300 men. Towards the end of this fighting a new Australian Division, the Second, arrived from Egypt; but the offensive was finished; the campaign was really closed. The decision to bring the troops back and throw their weight into the Western Front was unquestionably right. General Birdwood was given command of the Dardanelles Army during the evacuation. Every man on the Peninsula was transferred to reinforce in Salonica, Egypt, Mesopotamia, or France.

So Australians and New Zealanders wintered again in Egypt, fortifying the Canal, and in the huge administrative task of doubling their force. The old divisions were split, new ones created from reinforcements accumulated in Egypt. An Anzac Mounted Division was left in Egypt, and has from that moment—from Katia to Gaza—been the right hand of Egyptian defence.

The main army, the 1st and 2nd Anzac Corps, under General Birdwood and General Godley, arrived in France between April and June. It had three quiet months in the line. Then, on July 19th, one Australian division, with a British division, made an attack in the north, near Fromelles; three days later, in the south, the 1st Anzac Corps was launched against the then main German position on the Somme, the summit at Pozières.

The Real Tonic.

Pozières was the heaviest fight Australian troops have fought. For a month it was the main centre of movement on the Somme. Every German gun within range was concentrated against the summit. The shellfire was appalling; but, by fighting as heavy as has ever been, a German salient into the British line was converted into an Australian salient projecting behind Thiépval. On September 5th, when the Australians left the Somme, the New Zealanders were going in. In three separate attacks the N.Z. Division reached every objective and more. They went from before the Switch trench to beyond Flers in a single morning—one of the finest feats on the Somme. As they left the Somme, the Australians returned to it, before Bapaume. In November their year's fighting ended in the heartbreaking mud of Gueudecourt and the Butte.

In that mud the Australians and those beside them had to winter. Their trials have never been written. The icy, bright weather relieved them. But the real tonic was the discovery on February 24th that the Germans were retreating.

There followed heavy trench fighting before Bapaume and Loupart Wood. But from Bapaume onward came the open. At Beaumetz, Doignies, Louverval Demicourt, Lagnicourt, Hermies, Boursies, Noreuil were sharp successful fights. The Hindenburg Line was reached before the Germans intended.

Then, far on the flank of the Battle of Arras, an Australian division was launched at the Hindenburg Line near Bullecourt. The plan broke down, however, but the infantry, by a miracle, got through. They were cut off and many captured. On May 3rd the same sector was attacked with full artillery and flank support. The latter failed, at first, but the line was taken and held against nearly twenty counter-attacks, till a famous British brigade carried the trenches on the flank and made the position secure.

In June came Messines. The New Zealanders, in magnificent fettle, took Messines itself, with Australians on their right. Other Australians passed through, and in the second advance of the day Australian troops held half of the whole battle front, and were there till the battle finished.

Eastern Australia is having a colder winter than usual. The temperature in Sydney recently receded to 43 deg., and low temperatures were general through the State. At Nimitybelle the minimum was 20 deg.

At the inter-state conference of delegates from the National Councils of Women, in Melbourne, it was agreed that anti-shouting campaigns be carried out in each State. Suggestions were made regarding the censorship of films by the Commonwealth.

SPORTING NOTES.

F. Foley heads the list of riders who have won races at Sydney meetings—Randwick, Hawkesbury, Rosehill, Moorefield, Canterbury Park, and Warwick Farm—this season. His total is 22 wins, and he is succeeded by A. Wood and C. Barden, with 20 each.

The well-known gelding The Parisian (Bobadil—The Parisienne) was destroyed recently in Victoria, consequent on injuring himself in a race at a patriotic meeting. Foaled in 1905, he did not race as a two-year-old. He was five years when he won the Australian Cup, and the following season he added the Melbourne Cup to his account.

E. Moon's appeal against his disqualification by the stewards at Moorefield was dismissed by the A.J.C. Committee. It was not anticipated there would be a reversal of the decision, but in view of his previous good record, perhaps there may be a possibility of a reduction of the last few months of Moon's term of suspension, in order to give him a chance of getting fit before he resumes riding in public. Moon is such a good horseman that it is to be regretted he transgressed.

The Totalisator.

The popularity of the totalisator, which was in operation at the Maitland Jockey Club's races, recently, for the first time, was considerably enhanced by the dividend of £76 10s. paid on Orclad, the winner of the second race. The starting price in the ring was 20 to 1.

Racing on Unregistered Course.

William Hill, a well-known resident of Forest Reefs, appeared at Millthorpe Police Court recently, charged with holding a race meeting on an unregistered course. He was represented by Mr. Westgarth, who pleaded ignorance of the fact that it was an unregistered course. Hill was fined £500, in default one month's imprisonment. A month was allowed to pay.

Coincidences.

They've been at it again. Because two couples were spliced at an up-country N. S. Wales town half the residents, including the lady who lives at the parson's, backed Wedding Day for the Doncaster. The latter down the crick who puts in half a day a year looking for gold, staked his shirt on Fortune Hunter for Sydney Cup. That's the kind of rabbit-oh the book-makers have a keen, portmanteau ear for. I know one idiot who backed Camp Out for the Cup because he was going on a four-days' fishing trip to Shellharbour. Also, he had a saver on Yankee York because America had declared war. A Marrickville man whose proposal of marriage had been coldly received the previous evening plunged heavily on Spurn; and the rector of St. Potiphar's, whose word rivals that of G. Washington, told me that Green Cap shortened six points in the betting because a man walked up Pitt Street wearing an emerald-coloured head-dress. The rector said it was a hard job to get into Tatt.'s for an hour, and Timms's horse would probably have touched even money only some kilties with bagpipes happened to pass the Club, and the run on Highland Band saved the situation.

The Doncaster Handicap Winner.

The Doncaster Handicap winner Wedding Day's stake winnings this season total £3,397. Wedding Day's appearance is scarcely in keeping with the racing ability she has shown, and if, a little out of condition, she were put into the sale-ring and her identity kept dark, there would certainly be no rush to buy her on the score of good looks. She is on the small side, and light-framed into the bargain.

Influx of Imported Horses.

There were 87 runners for the six races at Randwick, at Tatt.'s winter meeting, and of these the following were imported:—Conquistador, Snow King, Bombita, Rushford, Lord Cecil, Irritation, Early Morn, Quinn's Post, Trinobantes, and Lancelot. As there was nothing eligible to compete in the Two-Year-Old Handicap, it will be seen that the percentage of imported runners was fairly high. But then it is the same at every meeting at Randwick nowadays, and if it were possible to get boats and horse-feed there would be some big shipments of bloodstock from England to Australia during the next few months, now that good horses can be bought cheaply.

GENERAL AUSTRALIAN NEWS

The Daylight Saving Act is to be repealed in Australia.

The exports of coal from Newcastle for the week ended May 25th totalled 58,910 tons. Of this quantity 31,120 tons went to Victoria and 22,980 to South Australia.

The Federal Prices Commissioner states that he is now certain there will be sufficient butter for Australia until next spring.

A block of land in Wynyard Square, Sydney, on which the Hotel Grand Central is situated was sold on May 25th for £42,500.

The Finance Committee of the Sydney City Council, at a recent meeting, agreed to increases to the salaries of officers of the Council for 1916-17-18, involving £2,500.

It is proposed to establish a pool for apples in Tasmania, on the lines of the pools for wheat and butter. Mr. Lee, the Tasmanian Premier, says there may be greater restrictions on exports of fruit next season.

On the application of the Barristers' Board, the Perth (W.A.) Full Court struck Frank Morley Alcock off the rolls. The Chief Justice regretted that Alcock was not present. He had apparently misapplied certain large sums of money in connection with certain estates, and had then absconded from the State.

Army Horses.

Since August, 1914, 43,487 horses have been supplied to the Australian Imperial Forces, of which 40,265 were purchased at a cost of £810,233,196, or an average of £20 a head. The great majority of these horses have been shipped overseas.

Wheat Pool.

Out of 53,804,000 bags of wheat in the 1915-16 pool, 26,403,000 bags have been shipped up to May 21st. The stock held by shipping agents totalled 11,484,000 bags, and the stock held by millers 1,034,000, on May 21st.

A Fatal Collision.

A fatal collision occurred in Mosman, N.S.W., on May 31st. A motor cycle, ridden by Gordon Joule, aged 16, crashed into a horse ridden by Locarto Carmella, aged 17, who resides at Mosman. The rider of the motor cycle was killed instantly, whilst the youth on the horse was knocked to the ground and received a fracture of the right leg. The horse was killed, and the motor cycle smashed.

Australian Workers Arrive.

In accordance with the arrangement entered into between the British and Australian Governments for the employment of Australian engineers, carpenters and joiners to work in this country, the first contingent of Australian workers reached England during the past week. They are a fine body of men. On Monday they were distributed over various Government works.

Remittances to Soldiers.

The system of the defence authorities, by which an advance up to £10 for furlough-money is given to each soldier whose credit balance on his pay-book does not permit of his drawing the full amount required for his holiday, will obviate to a great extent the necessity of relatives in Australia cabling money to soldiers abroad, which has assumed alarming proportions, remittances aggregating something like £5,000 daily.

Army Nurses.

Australian nurses who have been awaiting their chance to go to the front are gratified to learn from the Defence Minister that the Imperial authorities are asking for further supplies of trained nurses. Already 2,000 Australian nurses are serving abroad, and to meet the great demands expected there will be a general shortening of the training course to three years, instead of five, at the various hospitals.

Wives of Soldiers.

During a trial at Glen Innes, N.S.W., Quarter Sessions, it was stated that two witnesses, wives of soldiers, had been married only one day before their husbands sailed. Judge Hamilton said it was simply outrageous that people were called on to pay taxes to maintain the wives of soldiers who had been married in this way. He would certainly report the matter to the military authorities.

Burglary in Melbourne.

Burglars have been at work in Albert Park. They gained access to the Hotel Victoria, in Beaconsfield Parade, and after meandering about the second floor without disturbing any of the inmates, located the bar and took about £6 from two cash registers. The registers were carried into the private bar, where the smallest amount—1d.—on the machines was rung up and the contents extracted. Lest their identity might be revealed by finger prints, the thieves, before leaving, carefully wiped the registers with a scarf which they found under the bar counter.

Awards that Overlap.

A suggestion that steps be taken to define the scope of the Federal and State Industrial Arbitration Courts, in order to prevent overlapping, has been made by the Minister for Labour and Industry (Mr. Beeby). "One serious matter," said Mr. Beeby, "is the tendency of industrial awards to interfere with business management. Unfortunately the conflict between Federal and State awards is becoming very serious. We cannot have two sets of industrial tribunals operating in the same area. Since the Federal power is definitely established, I am prepared to face the necessity of vesting the whole industrial power under some system of Federal control.

Big Fire in Adelaide.

Terrifying Explosions.

One of the largest city fires for a considerable time occurred at a bond store in Wakefield Street, occupied by Messrs. Gambling and McDonald, carriers, early in the morning of May 31st. The building occupied a large area of ground, and the fire was soon burning with fury over half an acre of property.

A tremendous explosion hurled sheets of galvanised iron and other missiles across the adjoining roadway. At intervals other explosions occurred, and the noise was heard far into the suburbs surrounding Adelaide. In the vicinity of the outbreak some nervous women were with difficulty persuaded that a Zeppelin raid had not occurred. The force of the detonations shattered windows in some of the houses in the immediate locality, including the Christian Brothers' College on the opposite side of Wakefield Street.

Several narrow escapes were recorded. The explosions are attributed to a store of carbonic acid gas, used in the manufacture of aerated waters. Much praise is due to the resourcefulness and courage of the firemen, who braved considerable danger from falling debris, and the likelihood of further explosions.

One missile passed over a vacant allotment house, and then a road and an alley, before it reached its resting place on the roof. It is marvellous to relate that nobody was killed by it, as this particular obstacle constituted over a hundredweight of steel.

R. Meagher's Application for Reinstatement on Rolls.

Considerable interest was taken in the application made on May 28th to the Full Court for the reinstatement of Richard Dennis Meagher, as a solicitor of the Supreme Court of New South Wales. The application was made on the grounds that since November, 1909, applicant's conduct had been such as to justify his reinstatement. Mr. J. C. Gannon, K.C., who appeared for Mr. Meagher, made an impassioned appeal to the Court to let the book of his client's past life be closed, and referred to the high and honourable positions he had since filled—the Speakership of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales in the late Parliament and the Mayoral chair in the City Council. The Full Court, however, refused the application for reinstatement on the rolls.

Woman as Gambler.

In the course of a judgment in the Criminal Court, one of the judges of New South Wales gave it as his opinion that a woman who gambled on race-horses was as irreclaimable as one of the sex who became addicted to drink. This is the opinion of a jurist of long experience on the bench, and must be taken seriously. Happily, few women gamble on the uncertain game of horse, where the chance of winning money is more than remote. But there is no doubt that the opinion of the judge is endorsed by the facts. The sporting man who follows the horses knows that the betting woman will go to the extreme limit to get information as to the value of a particular animal mentioned in the quotations. It may be easier to wean a woman from betting than from drinking, but one suffering from either of the afflictions is to be pitied.—“The Globe,” Sydney.

Repatriation Methods.

The qualifications committee allows the applicants for certificates to express their preference for any particular class of holding. The following percentages indicate the preferences of the applicants:—Dairy, 10 per cent.; mixed farming, 43 per cent.; fruit, 16½ per cent.; poultry, 20½ per cent.; and wheat, 10 per cent.

The following percentages show the preference for localities:—Irrigation, 24½ per cent.; mallee, 13½ per cent.; Gippsland, 20½ per cent.; metropolitan, 22½ per cent.; central, 10 per cent.; western, 4 per cent.; and northern, 5 per cent.

For grazing lands there has been one applicant, and for a nursery block, one applicant.

The Minister of Lands of Tasmania said that advances were being given to returned soldiers to enable them to purchase working stock, horses or bullocks, dairy stock and breeding ewes. The amount lent had to be repaid in five years, starting with interest at 3½ per cent and ½ per cent. additional annually till 5 per cent. was reached. Payment for implements had to be completed on similar terms in ten years. The Minister considered a very good practical start had been made.

Minister for Customs.

Narrow Escape from Death.

The Minister for Customs (Mr. Jensen) had a miraculous escape from being killed on May 30th. He was proceeding to his home at McCombie Street, Elsternwick. There was a great crush of passengers, and before Mr. Jensen was able to board the train properly it moved off. The Minister slipped, and his right foot was caught between the footboard and the platform. Mr. Jensen was dragged along for some yards, and then, by a wonderful effort, he managed to free himself. The alarm was given, and the train was pulled up.

Mr. Jensen, although suffering great pain, managed to take his seat in the carriage, and when he reached his home, Dr. E. B. Allen, of Elsternwick, was called in, and found that the ligature of the right foot had been badly strained.

The Price of Hats.

The Federal Prices Commissioner (Mr. W. H. Clarke) has sent a circular to every hat manufacturer who is obtaining rabbit skins under the Government scheme, asking them to sign a statutory declaration that they will not increase the price of locally-made hats while they are receiving their skins through the Government. The letter states that, as they (the manufacturers) are getting the skins at prices which are less than the full market value, they should be prepared to allow the public some advantage. This action was taken by the Commissioner, because of a big increase in the price of imported hats, owing to the difficulty experienced by manufacturers in other parts of the world in obtaining skins, and to prevent what is known as a sympathetic rise taking place in the price of locally-made hats.

Australian Population Figures.

The population of the Commonwealth, which was expected to surpass the five million mark before the end of the year, still lags back on account of the war. On September 30th, it is officially given at 4,895,124, against 4,940,952 at the end of 1914, when high-water mark was reached. There are now just 150 persons to each 100 square miles of territory in the Commonwealth, or 1½ persons to each square mile. New South Wales carries 532 persons to each 100 square miles, and Victoria 1,497. In 1916 the arrivals into the Commonwealth totalled 63,361, and departures therefrom 197,297. Of course, movements of troops overseas prejudiced the figures during the period. The immigration scheme naturally has all but ceased. Last year 1,405 nominated and selected immigrants were landed in the Commonwealth, against 5,796 in 1915; 20,805 in 1914; 37,445 in 1913; and 46,714 in 1912, when the immigration movement was at its height.

Mice and a Cat.

Perhaps more than Victoria, South Australia is overrun with mice. They are found in millions in wheat paddocks, unprotected haystacks, vegetable gardens, and houses. Farmers are unable to ripen their tomatoes and pumpkins because the hungry army of mice nibbles them while the vegetables are still green. As an instance of the number of mice in private houses in South Australia, the weekly record of a cat with a fondness for hunting may be given. This cat has earned celebrity, and her doings have been wired to the Press of the capital. She has four kittens, and evidently devotes her nights to catching food for them. In eight consecutive mornings the housekeeper found on or near the back door mat no fewer than 302 mice, and on each occasion the kittens had so gorged themselves that they could not enjoy their usual romp. The nightly tally was 14, 20, 44, 76, 44, 20, 55 and 47. In the crop of a chicken killed for the table were found seven mice, tightly packed.

The Federal Capital.

In a recent "Melbourne Leader" the following strong comments are made:—

The Federal capital has become a glaring scandal. Not only was its inception marked by many unpleasant features, but the methods of construction and management are shown by Mr. Blacket's reports to have been marked by incapacity and inefficiency. These results are due in large measure to political interference. There was no proper control over expenditure, and the rules and regulations which are supposed to control government outlay were set aside without consideration or rebuke. There can be no doubt that the officials were gravely to blame in many instances, but we are shown also that Ministerial supervision is a delusion.

KING O'MALLEY'S MANAGEMENT.

Mr. Blacket's reports are a drastic commentary on Mr. King O'Malley's claim to administrative ability. There was a great mistake made in attempting to control all affairs from Melbourne. There was no responsible officer in charge, continuously resident, and generally speaking the principle of management seems to have been a sort of "go as you please" policy. Mr. Blacket instances a number of cases where money was blindly if not wilfully wasted. No one knows exactly what any building cost, and we are told that many now stand in the books at much more than their actual value. The military college at Duntroon has absorbed something over £200,000, but Colonel Owen, who was presumably in charge, asserts that he was kept absolutely in the dark as to the outlay, and could obtain no particulars of expenditure. The system of bookkeeping was worse than a farce, and brings confusion more than enlightenment.

WANT OF FORESIGHT.

How little foresight was displayed in the construction of works is illustrated in the instance of the Cotter dam. When it was well on to completion it was suddenly discovered that to raise it 10ft. higher and impound 560,000,000 gallons more water would cost only £3,000 extra. There was waste also through the omission of proper consideration for the convenience of workmen. Had their requirements been properly attended to, more efficient workers could have been secured. Mr. Blacket assumes that of the estimated 40 per cent. of additional and unnecessary expenditure, 20 per cent. may be attributed to allowances to workmen. There is so much cause for blame all round that it has to be very widely distributed.

A Letter Objected To.

Considerable indignation was expressed by delegates at the A.L.F. metropolitan council meeting, W.A., at the receipt of a letter from Messrs. Foy

AUSTRALIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY.

A remarkable example of the value of the faculty of observation in a soldier is related in the June report of the Australian Red Cross Commissioner in London. It will be recalled that during the fighting in the spring, two Australian soldiers who, with others, had been cut off and captured, escaped and got back unharmed to their own lines. These two men, Lee-Cpl. Parsons and Pte. Stewart, after studying the Red Cross Inquiry List, have been able to identify over 60 "missing" men as among those whom they had seen captured. The Red Cross Society has therefore been able to set at rest the anxieties of those who had sent inquiries as to the fate of the missing men, and will in due course be able to send the men the usual prisoners' parcel of food and other necessaries.

PRISONERS OF WAR.

Following on the activity in France since the weather became suitable for fighting, there has been a considerable increase in the number of prisoners on the Australian Red Cross list. The present total stands at 1,743 in Germany and 98 in Turkey. During June, 9,270 food parcels and 926 parcels of clothing were despatched. It is impossible to secure delivery of parcels to prisoners in Turkish hands at present, and in place of them the Red Cross is sending 10s. in cash to each man every month. About 180 people have "adopted" Australian prisoners and undertaken to provide the Red Cross with the means to supply them with their regular parcels.

INQUIRIES BY CABLE.

Large numbers of inquiries by cable and letter continue to be received at the Australian Red Cross Headquarters in London. The June total of cable inquiries as to the fate of soldiers was 3,102, and the Red Cross were able to despatch 2,520 replies. About 1,300 postal inquiries came from Australia, and locally, and in 831 cases information was supplied.

There are 21 disabled Australian soldiers now receiving training at the Brighton Technical College.

There seems to be no limit to the expansion of the work of the Red Cross. Last month, at the London store, 17,462 packages were handled—6,789 were received and 10,673 sent out to various hospitals and depôts. Comforts were sent to three steamers returning to Australia with wounded soldiers on board.

Men in hospital often write to express their gratitude to the Red Cross and to the ladies who give up their time to see that their needs are attended to. Here is an extract from a typical letter:—

"I am the only Australian in this hospital, and I can tell you the other lads were quite envious of me receiving the parcel. So it has set them all declaring to emigrate to Australia after the war. . ."

and Gibson, in reply to a request that that firm should state its future attitude on the question of allowing both sides of a political campaign to be stated before its employees. The letter read: "Yours of May 28th to hand. Our action was one of discrimination between war to victory, and anything less than that. It had nothing to do with internal politics. Our warehouse never has been, nor do we intend that it shall be, a campaigning ground for political purposes." It was decided, after some comments by delegates, to make the reply available to all unions.

"White Australia."

The Minister for the Navy (Mr. Cook) said, on May 28th, that statements which were being circulated by certain leading members of the P.L.L., to the effect that the white Australia policy was being evaded by the introduction of Chinese, were ridiculous and absurd, and those responsible for them were only trying to mislead the public, as they did throughout the recent election campaign. They tried to put a different complexion upon the most simple and innocent things, and were treating the public intelligence with scant consideration if they thought the public would swallow such stuff and nonsense.

The Sins of Sydney.

At the final sitting of the New South Wales Presbyterian Assembly, the committee on public morals reported that there had been a great improvement in the conditions in Sydney. There was not nearly so much wickedness and open vice and crime on the streets now. This could be attributed largely to the 6 o'clock closing of bars. A most noticeable result had been the removing of bad characters from the streets late at night. At the same time, the city of Sydney had not become a paradise. It was an established fact that there were 15 per cent. of the people of Sydney suffering from venereal disease. A motion was carried urging the suspension of racing and stadium exhibitions during the war.

War Honours for the A.I.F.

A Supplement to the "London Gazette" contains a list of distinctions which have been awarded by His Majesty the King for conspicuous gallantry in the field and devotion to duty. The awards to members of the A.I.F. are as follows:—

The Military Cross has been awarded to:—

THE MILITARY MEDAL

Sec. Lt. ARCHIBALD JOHN TYE, Aust. Inf. —His courage and coolness in leading bombing attacks was most marked. He was wounded and his way back to safety with all his men. In doing so he received three bayonet wounds. He was brilliant in his disregard for personal cut off in an enemy counter-attack, but fought safety.

Lt. FREDERICK MURCHISON WAUGH, Aust. Inf.—During a heavy enemy bombardment and raid he correctly appreciated the situation, organised his men, and was on the spot to meet the raiders. His prompt action was the prime cause of the repulse of the raiders, and his example of courage and initiative had great influence on the spirit of his men.

Capt. HADDEN HAMILTON YOUNG, Aust. Inf.—For conspicuous gallantry during a hostile attack, when he drove the enemy off, and, with great courage and skill, organised and led a counter-attack, which finally ejected the enemy from their position. His fine example greatly influenced all ranks with him.

Changes in the Civil Service, S.A.

The Surveyor-Generalship of South Aus., a post held in the long past by Light and Sturt in turn, is to be a different thing in future. Up to the time of E. M. Smith, just retired, the holder of it has been "in the office," the permanent head of the Lands Department. Pethick, the new holder, is to keep on surveying, and Britten Jones, the recent Deputy, is to give all his time to valuing for the Government. E. J. Field becomes secretary to the Lands Minister and administrative head of the Department, with Messent as his understudy; and the veteran Tom Duffield, 50 years in the office, and lately Secretary of Lands, takes charge of a new-made Local Government branch—roads and bridges and such things.

Veteran Politicians, S.A.

The 60th anniversary of the first S. Aus. Parliament under Responsible Government has set the Adelaide papers hunting for veteran politicians. There is one survivor, H. B. T. Strangways, who was a youthful prodigy, but retired to England nearly half a century ago. The nearest rival in sight is Charles Goode, who had a brief spell of politics in 1865, but soon retired to turn his attention to soft-goods and philanthropy. This veteran, who puts in the shade even Edwin Smith (87, and still going strong), opened in May an extension of his favourite charity, the North Adelaide Blind Institution, by way of celebrating his 90th birthday.

Wireless Telephones.

A correspondent of the "Sydney Bulletin" writes as follows:—"Billjim won't be paying elevenpence a word for his wireless messages much longer. The wireless telephone has arrived. Extensive developments in radiotelephony have taken place during the past year in the U.S.A., and the thing is now such a success that some ships are already fitted. It was a surprised crew of an Australian wireless station who heard a voice calling him the other week from a ship in the Pacific between America and these shores. Arlington radio station (U.S.A.), speaking into his 'phone, was heard at San Francisco, Hawaii, and Eiffel Tower (Paris). The wireless telephone is superior to the wire telephone. The articulation is much clearer and there is a freedom from distortion. Speech transmitted from U.S.A. to France was received despite heavy interference from high-power stations at Poldhu and Norddeich and also through strong atmospheric disturbances."

"The British Campaign in France and Flanders, 1915."

By ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE.

The second volume of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's history of the war (Hodder & Stoughton, 6s. net) is concerned with the battles of Neuve Chapelle, Hill 60 and St. Eloi, the second battle of Ypres, Richebourg-Festubert, the trenches of Hooge, and the great battle of Loos, after which Lord French returned to England, and was succeeded in the command by Sir Douglas Haig.

"The three years of the war," says the author, "may be roughly divided into the year of defence, the year of equilibrium, and the year of attack. This volume concerns itself with the second, which in its very nature must be less dramatic than the first or third. None the less, it contains some of the most moving scenes of the great world tragedy, and especially the second Battle of Ypres and the great Battle of Loos, two desperate conflicts, the details of which have not, so far as I know, been given to the public."

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's book does not claim to be final, but it is the first to reveal the participating units and their dispositions in the various operations described. The most satisfactory result of this is that it readjusts to some extent a right perspective long in danger of being lost, namely, that which shows up in proper proportion the part and action of the Regular English Forces in the campaign. Those who knew have always taken them for granted, while younger armies were being treated to the limelight more generously than they, and this story will help the less observant to acknowledge their due meed of attention. Their heroism has been unflinching, their efficiency and staunchness beyond praise, in warfare not only of the fiercest, but designed to destroy by surprise through resort to methods which the chivalry of those attacked would not have allowed them to use, namely, by poison gas and liquid fire.

In the author's account of Langemarck, a point of contention in the Battle of Ypres, we read of the first use of the poison which has fouled the German name with a mark not only long but black. From the base of the German trenches there appeared jets of whitish vapour. These, impelled by a northern breeze, drifted swiftly across the space between the two lines. "The French troops, staring over the top of their parapet at this curious screen which ensured them a temporary relief from fire, were observed suddenly to throw up their hands, to clutch at their throats, and to fall to the ground in agonies of asphyxiation. . . . The Germans, meanwhile, advanced and took possession of the successive lines of trenches tenanted only by the dead garrisons. . . . Some thousands of stupefied prisoners, eight batteries of French field guns, and four British 4.7's . . . were the trophies won by this disgraceful victory." The strikers were removed from the British guns before they were abandoned, and it should be added "that both the young officers present, Lieuts. Sandeman and Hamilton Field, died beside their guns, after the tradition of their corps."

For the long list of heroic first efforts against modern wire, trench, machine-gun and artillery, the book itself must be consulted. It contains on page after page tales of desperate valour and glorious achievement, and, as said above, gives a picture of the British Army, in conjunction with Canadian and Indian Divisions, taking its first course in the real school of modern war. For proof that these have been passed with honours, we may look to Messines and Vimy Ridge, and, one hopes, later on to other places. The reader is not likely to find the story undramatic.

Railways in New South Wales.

Replying to a deputation at West Maitland, the Chief Commissioner of Railways said:—"We have not a single pound to spend. We have had to stop works all over the State—works half finished and works three-quarters finished. The people of New South Wales will have to put up with great inconveniences for the next few years."

With regard to the temporary stoppage of the works to be transferred under the Norton Griffiths contract, the Minister of Public Works explains that this is a temporary stoppage necessary to remeasure the work, to take stock and to check plant for the transfer of the work.

In Perth, on May 10th, John Ryall and Henry Trengrove, who stole £181 in cash and jewellery to the value of £400 from the mail room of the steamer "Indarra" between Albany and Adelaide, were each sentenced to three years' hard labour.

GAMAGE'S

THE G.H.Q. OF ARMY OUTFITTING.

There are Trench Coats and Trench Coats, but ONLY ONE
GAMAGE SUMMER TRENCHER

and thanks to its superlative qualities as a "Service" garment it has proved a huge success. Officers who have tested its merits are recommending it to others in all quarters as a model of durability and perfect comfort in Military wear.

The Gamage Summer Trencher is a SCIENTIFIC PRODUCTION

inasmuch as the material used in its construction is scientifically treated to ensure the maximum degree of rain resistance. Then too, it is cut and made on scientific principles.

Its extreme lightness is another point in its favour. Lined same material as outside of coat & interlined silskin.
