New South Wales Revenue.

Sydney, 1st June.

The net revenue of New South Wales for May amounted to £1,796,000, as compared with £1,714,000 in May 1916. The principal increases were: Income tax, £82,000; railways, £56,000. The principal decreases were: Stamps, £24,000; betting taxes, £12,000; harbour services, £11,000. The net revenue for the ten months of the financial year amounted to £17,082,000, as compared with £16,493,000 for the corresponding period of last year.

King's Birthday Celebrations in Australia.

Melbourne, 5th June. At Ballarat 500 trees were planted in Sturt Street as a tribute to the heroism of 500 Ballarat soldiers. A plate was attached to each tree-guard bearing the name of a soldier. The scheme was organised by a girl in E. Lucas and Company's factory.

In Perth the holiday was styled "Reinforcement Day." There was a procession, military sports, and an ecclesiastical rally in aid of recruiting.

In Brisbane a big repatriation effort was made.

Hobart celebrated the day as Navy Day, to provide comforts for the navy.

In Melbourne there was a gymkhana and fete in aid of the St. John Ambulance Association on the Richmond racecourse, and an old English fair at the Town Hall in aid of the British Red Cross Society.

Heavy Damages against "The Sentinel."

Brisbane, 6th June.

The jury has awarded £4,990 damages to the Hon. T. C. Beirne, M.L.C., against Mr. Neil McKenzie, the proprietor of "The Sentinel" newspaper, Brisbane, for an alleged defamatory sectarian article, and £10 damages against the printer, Mr. Carter.

Memorial to Archbishop Carr.

Melbourne, 6th June.

At a meeting convened to consider the question of a memorial to the late Archbishop Carr, it was resolved to erect a chapel in the Catholic College at the Melbourne University at an expenditure of at least £20,000.

A Remarkable Case.

Sydney, 7th June.

A remarkable case is reported in the press. An old man found unconscious on the road near Bathurst was taken to the local hospital, and later pronounced dead and removed to the morgue. Next day the body was seen to move on the morgue table. The man was returned to the hospital, but died on the following day. The whole matter is now under investigation.

Melbourne, 7th June. The Ada Reeves Anzac Buffet Fund now totals £3,500.

Post-War Exhibition Proposed. Perth, 7th June.

A large representative committee at Perth has formulated a scheme for a post-war Exposition to celebrate the opening of the trans-continental railway, at an estimated cost of about £125,000.

Federal Bye-Election at Darwin.

Hobart, 7th June.

The writ for the bye-election at Darwin, Tasmania, for the Federal Parliament, has been issued. Nominations will be made on June 14th, and polling will be held on June 30th. The date for the return of the writ is July 14th.

Saving Shipping Space.

Melbourne, 7th June.

As a result of experiments, made with a view to conserving shipping space, in the compression of wool and the scientific packing of meat, a saving of 30 per cent. of wool space and 20 per cent. of meat space is reported. It is anticipated that a conference will be held shortly in Sydney in regard to the export of frozen meat.

Serious Floods in Victoria.

Melbourne, June 8th. Serious floods have occurred in the Ovens and King Rivers; six deaths are reported from Wangaratta, and several other persons are in imminent danger. Councillor John Nicol, while engaged in helping to remove people to safety in a horse and dray near King Bridge, had his horse swept off its legs by the swirling current into a large depression. Mr. Nicol, Mr. James Lee, Mrs. Richards and two daughters were drowned without any possibility of ren-dering assistance. Thomas Rhodes, who was driving horses on the Wilson Road, was swept off the road and drowned. The Superintendent of Police is requisitioning boats from Melbourne.

The new concrete bridges at German Town, Porepunkah and Bright have given way; also several small bridges on the railway line have been washed away near Ovens Vale Station. railway service is suspended on the Yarrawonga line. It is feared that the floods are spreading to Shepparton and Seymour.

The Victorian Floods.

Melbourne, June 9th. The floods in the Ovens and King Rivers reached at the highest point 18 feet above summer level. A rapid rise in the Goulburn River submerged the older portion of Seymour to a depth of 5 feet on Friday. In the Bright district further damage is reported. All the bridges have been destroyed in the Buckland Valley. The Kiewa River has completely changed its course.

America and Australia.

Melbourne, June 9th.

American citizens in Melbourne gave a dinner last night to the Governor-General at Menzies Hotel to commemorate the entry of the United States into the war. Mr. H. C. Cornforth presided and the guests included the State Governor, Sir H. L. Stanley, Mr. Pearce, Minister of Defence, and the Premier of Victoria, Sir A. Peacock. Great enthusiasm prevailed and there were many expressions of the admiration and esteem in which the British and American races hold each other. A message was read from President Wilson: "I gladly associate myself with our citizens in this manifestation of international goodwill." Sir Munro Ferguson, responding to the toast of his health, said that as the King's representative he responded most cordially to the sentiments of good fellowship and good feeling by the President who now leads a united people into the great world war for liberty, right and justice. The American constitution was constructed with the object of making it difficult to go to war. It was as hard to bring the United States into a defensive war as it was easy for Germany to spring into a war of aggression. (Great cheering.) Britain was proud to think that the great Republic owed its traditions, institutions and ideals to England, while England owed to the United States the success of her relations with the Dominions and Dependencies of the Empire. (Loud applause.) The Governor of Victoria, Sir H. L. Stanley, said the fact that the United States did not spring to arms at the first cry of injured humanity, but had come in after mature consideration. showed a deliberateness and a resolve which spoke well for her continuance in the task she had taken in hand.

(Applause.)
Mr. Hughes sent a message stating: "On behalf of the people of the Com-monwealth of Australia I send heartiest greetings, through their representatives assembled here to-night; to the citizens of the United States of America, whose entry into the war brings not only the assurance of decisive victory, but is a justification of the righteousness of the cause for which the British Empire and the Allies have drawn the sword. The people of the great Republic are to be congratulated that, uninspired by fear, they have taken up arms for freedom, and deliberately turning away from the enticing lure of dazzling prosperity bought at the price of non-participation in the war, they now, clear-eyed and resolute, walk the straight road of national honour. Out of its supremest test the American democracy has emerged triumphant. By their act the free citizens of America have proved themselves worthy of freedom, and Australia rejoices and is glad to stand by her side and fight for the cause of liberty and civilisation. America and Australia to-day are drawn together by bonds of common ideals, made strong by sacrifice, which time and circumstances will cement still more solidly for our common good."

The Commonwealth Capital.

Sydney, 8th June.

Consequent upon the discovery that £1,700,000 has been spent upon Canberra without showing much result and that £8,000,000 is still to be spent, an agitation has been started to amend the Constitution and make Sydney the Federal capital. Mr. Watt, the Minister of Works, after visiting Canberra, says:—"It is a very pretty dream, but I don't know whether Australia can afford beautiful dreams during the critical financial period which is rapidly approaching."—Ex. Tel.

The Conscription Issue.

Melbourne, 11th June.

Sir W. Irvine, speaking at the declaration of the poll for Flinders, said that so far as Flinders was concerned the election was fought only on the conscription issue. His majority, increased from 1,400 to 7,000, showed that the feeling of the people was that conscription must come. The Prime Minister's condition precedent to taking another Referendum was already satisfied. Sir W. Irvine said he felt it his imperative duty to bend all his energies to endeavour to secure conscription.

P.L.L. and Peace Terms.

Sydney, 11th June.

Mr. Joseph Cook, commenting on the resolution of the Political Labour League's conference in Sydney in favour of an international conference to arrange peace terms, said that almost at the same time the Kaiser made the fiendish declaration, "We must be pitiless against the odious British nation, from which comes all our evils." Continuing, Mr. Cook said, "you might as well talk to wild beasts as to Germans, who only laugh at professions for equitable settlement. Their ideas of equity and ours are as wide asunder as heaven and hell."

GENERAL CABLES.

A thrift campaign organised by various women's societies in Victoria, was inaugurated on June 9th.

Lady Hennessy, Lady Mayoress of Melbourne, is appealing for 100,000 pairs of socks for the Comforts Fund.

Dean, McCarthy was consecrated Bishop of Sandhurst, Bendigo, on Thursday.

Political parties in West Australia, excluding the official Labour members, who declined to attend, have decided to form an elective Ministry.

Mr. Justice Pickburn, K.C., who was raised to the Bench under the New South Wales Arbitration Act in February, died suddenly on June 10th.

In the actions taken by Messrs. Doyle and Mutch against Mr. Hugh McIntosh and the "Sunday Times" newspaper for alleged libel, a verdict has been given for the defendants.

The Defence authorities are investigating a parasitic disease, Bilharzia, brought to Australia by soldiers invalided from Egypt. The disease is caused by a worm or fluke which thrives in bathing pools and attaches itself to the skin and bores into the victim's body.

At an Anzac Buffet Matinee at the Tivoli on Friday afternoon over £1,000 was raised. Barry Lupino conducted the auction of gifts sent to be sold, and Ada Reeve announced there was no doubt that they could cable £5,000 to England on Monday.

The Ada Reeve Victorian appeal for the Anzac Buffet realised £5,148. On June 11th £5,000 was cabled. It is intended to open a similar fund in Sydney.

Floods continue in the Bright district, Victoria. The Ovens is now covering miles of country. Roads are completely washed away and Harrietville is isolated. The Goulburn River continues to rise at Shepparton. At Tallangatta the flood waters have fallen 18 inches, Great damage has been done to wire fences. At Seymour the waters are receding slowly. The damage is more severe than in the September floods. At Yarrawonga the Murray River rose 9 feet on Friday night, 8th June. At Tocumwal it is 11 feet above summer level.

In a cable from the Conference of the United Commercial Travellers' Association of Australasia, the High Commissioner for Australia has been asked to convey to His Majesty the King their unanimous resolution affirming the devoted loyalty of the United and Affiliated Associations of Commercial Travellers and their members, and their fervent hope that the war may speedily terminate in an honourable peace with victory for the Allies, meanwhile offering the enthusiastic and complete cooperation of the Association and its members towards the accomplishment of that end.—(Signed) James Davies, General Secretary.

Latest Sporting Cables.

Waverley Geikie beat Eddie Lynagh, at Brisbane, for the Queensland lightweight championship. The referee stopped the fight at the sixteenth round.

Tommy Uren gained a decision on points over Fred Kay, at Sydney Stadium, on Saturday, after twenty rounds of clever, strenuous fighting, for the welterweight championship.

Melbourne, 11th June.

Llew Edwards, the holder of the lightweight championship of Australia, easily beat Charlie Simpson, at Melbourne Stadium, on Saturday. The referee stopped the fight at the thirteenth round. Six thousand persons were present.

The Queensland Public Works Commission has been instructed to inquire into the advisability of establishing State iron and steel works.

Mr. Holman, Premier of New South Wales, has arrived in France from Australia. He has had a conference with M. Ribot, and is now visiting the French front.

Racing.

The Gawler (S.A.) Racing Club has adopted the new Exchange Totalisator, which was to be duly installed at the course by the end of May. If the Gabriel patent fulfils in practice all the promise of the working model it will be a bit of a facer for the A.J.C. The patent machine adopted by that club will cost about £10,000 to set up, whereas the Gawler installation is estimated to cost less than £1,000.

There was at least one lucky punter over the Newmarket and Australian Cup double. He is a young Sydney barrister, who doesn't bet heavily or often, but having a notion that a couple of imported nags might win these events, backed the right pair—£2,000 to £8. Service of a cheque was accepted without fee.

Messines.

Australians' and New Zealanders' Flank Attack.

By C. E. W. BEAN.

British Headquarters, June 7th.

This morning Australians fighting by the side of New Zealanders in their first great common battle since Gallipoli, swung round to make the flank of a great attack on Messines, and penetrated into the strong German position behind Messines Ridge. For many days there had been tremendous practice bombardments which reduced the houses of Wytschaete to ruins and Messines Hill to powder. Raiding parties often went across behind these bombardments, nearly always finding German trenches well held at some point, and bringing back many prisoners.

This morning when the first streak of dawn was just showing, the British on the left and Australians and New Zealanders on the right attacked under a hurricane bombardment and with the explosion on right and left of seven great mines. Throughout the night the Germans had drenched the whole landscape, woods, hill-slopes and trenches in front of them with gas shells. Despite this, the whole attack went more precisely and mathematically to programme than any ever made by Germans or British, so far as I know.

An Australian Division on the right, coming through gas-drenched woods without the slightest hitch, crossed the River Douve in No Man's Land, and advanced from one shattered trench to another, from ruined farmhouse to farmhouse, all the time keeping within fifty to a hundred yards of the gradually advancing line of its own shell-fire. For two hours it was impossible to see anything through the dense clouds of dust and shell smoke. Then figures of New Zealanders were seen moving on the ridge-top by the ruins of Messines. More men appeared south of it. As the haze gradually cleared, the British could be seen on the summit of the ridge, away to the North, and the Australians moving by woods and farms in the Douve Valley to the South.

Within a few hours the whole morning's attack had succeeded; men were moving into position for a further advance. The Germans at the same time were massing for a counter-attack. The British preparatory bombardment appeared to catch this counter-attack and crush it. Australians then attacked beyond Messines along the whole right to complete the capture of the Ridge. This attack at points where we could see it reached the German trenches, men were fighting at one point side by side with three tanks. But the roar of the bombardment there was still terribly heavy. One portion of a trench which had been re-taken by the Germans was taken again by Australians. I do not know at this moment the exact result. The Australians consisted of Victorians and Tasmanians. These captured a certain number of machine guns, two of which were immediately used against the Germans, and two German field guns, besides about a hundred prisoners. In the afternoon attack further Germans were captured, and could be seen coming back in droves, but the exact number taken by Australians it is as yet impossible to ascertain.

AUSTRALIAN LINES ADVANCED.

By C. E. W. BEAN.

British Headquarters, France, June 10.

Since counter-attacks by Prussians and Bavarians on June 7th and the night of June 8th came to nothing in front of Messines, despite the heavy bombardment with which they prepared, the Germans appear to have withdrawn their main force to their next line, leaving strong posts with machine guns in various nests in the wide belt of No-man's Land now intervening between the opposing lines. Australian patrols last night had several fights with these posts. Since my last message the Australian line has been considerably advanced. It is no secret that the whole attack has been successful beyond the limits of original expectations.

THE GREAT ATTACK.

Exactly as It Appeared.

Part I. Diary from Hour to Hour.

By C. E. W. BEAN.

British Headquarters, France, June 9.

There was never such a spectacle in warfare as the attack on the Messines Ridge. One watched it as it were from an arm-chair looking across on to the stage. Here is the exact picture as we saw it hour by hour.

It was dark when I went to call for the New Zealand War Correspondent. Everywhere along the road one passed small columns of fully-loaded men moving silently through the night— New Zealanders, Australians, British. At New Zealand Headquarters there were lights in the Mess Room and a pot of tea was always ready on the brightly lit table inside. As we motored towards the front everything was in the most perfect order. I never saw a hint or suspicion of a hitch. Suddenly on the dark flats we ran into a gas stream -out of it-into a second gas stream. So the German was shelling these regions with gas and tear shell.

Where we left the car the gas had thinned; but as we walked there began to fall around, almost as softly as the big raindrops that precede a thunderstorm, showers of small shell from distant field guns. They seemed to be sprinkled all over the country as if through a garden sprayer. The soft whistle and pat, pat, pat of the little bursts was continuous on every side. The country was thick with a musty smell as of chloroform sandwiched between strong whiffs of lavendersmelling tear-shell, and occasionally the pungent mustard of some other poison. Long after we reached our trench this hosing of the country with shell steadily continued.

The particular corner to which we made our way was for that night occupied by an Auckland battalion. Before us straight across the valley about two thousand yards away was Messines-we could see the dull shellbursts on the dust of the ridge and occasionally a flare went up from the face of it. Sometimes flares dropped far away behind it; they must have been where the British line curled round it in the Ypres salient far to the left.

Moments of Intense Anxiety.

Those were moments of intense anxiety to the onlookers. Would the German see our movement and guess that the attack was immediately imminent? At ten minutes past two at two points of the front a flare of quite a different sort shot into the air-very straight and high and the brilliant light sailed slowly down—it took a good minute and a half to come to earth. Our big guns seemed to quicken at the same time-but nothing came from the German except the same pat, pat, pat of gas shell and the occasional lily-like white light illuminating No-man's Land.

A partially gassed man passed up the trench. "The bastard," he said,

"burst one in the bay."

Then, when all seemed to be progressing unbelievably well, with only eighteen minutes to go, two green and two yellow flares shot suddenly into the sky. As they settled one noticed that they fell behind the ridge. They must be from the extreme left of the British line away in front of Ypres.

Immediately, flare after flare curved over the horizon in that far corneryellow, green, then red, and whole sheafs of white. Something must have been seen there. Every German field gun throwing gas shell stopped suddenly. Presently low flashes over the skyline in that direction showed that a German barrage had come down there already. Could it be the German had discovered the left of our attack, or was it some feint of ours away beyond the left-perhaps a raid from the salient.

Anyway, everything is perfectly peaceful at our front. Five minutes after they had ceased, the gas shell began to slip down again quite normally. Never was shellfire so welcome.

The First Alarm.

Twelve minutes to go. A big New Zealander has come along the trench. "Come, you blokes," he said, "tucker -any of you not had your breakfast?" Big dixies of tea had been carried along the trench some time before, and the men had been munching and yarning in the dark. Pat, pat of gas-shell continues.

Nine minutes to go. Still undiscovered. A bright round moon. The first warm streaks of dawn are just showing above Messines. The German has burst a few big gas shell down towards the front line. "Where's these blanky bombs?" says a voice. The men in this trench are not for the first wave, but they are getting their things together. An officer walks along the parapet. "Got those picks?" he asks.

Five minutes. Those German barrage flares still going up in sheafs on the

Four minutes. A single great bright double green flare has suddenly shot up from the foot of Messines Ridge straight ahead of us. There is no question where that was-directly in front of the Australians and New Zealanders. A machine-gun starts-then a -second joins in—then a third. A second green flare goes up. The three machine-guns are hard at it. A big shell bursts near by. Fair in the middle of the dark slope opposite a single rifle flashed like an electric spark. There is no question they have seen something.

At Last.
Two minutes to go. The machineguns have petered into silence. The hillslope is as peaceful as it ever was. Three of our big guns have firedothers follow within a second or two, somewhat as a man quickens his first steps when he starts to run. Then-

The whole trench wall rocked inwards and swayed and then rocked and thumped again. Far away to the left a huge dull red bubble, covered with a grey slag suddenly grows, and then bursts, throwing a rosy red underglow on some thick cloud hanging above it. Then another bursts beside it, and another. The ground rocks and sways and rocks long before there arrives the tremendous delayed detonation. Brilliant sheafs of molten substance beside the mines-then more mine bursts within a second or two further left behind the ridge; simultaneously three similar heavy red bursts away on the right. My God, but what a stage management!

It all happened in less time than it takes to tell. It was followed by an immediate simultaneous roar of machine-gun fire. Not a chatter, but a single rip into uproar. And then the bombardment came down and drowned it.

For just two hours from that moment one might as well have sat down in the trench with one's back to the fight. There was nothing distinguishable to see or hear. The whole valley was full of noise and dense with deep grey smoke. The barrage which one expected did not come on that trench. A stray rifle bullet or two flew over. Occasional shells fell near. One could hear machine guns chattering through the fog, but they gradually ceased. The few white and red flares which overtopped the dust grew rarer and rarer, until they were clearly only rising beyond the ridge. The men in the trench put on their kit. The order came to fix bayonets. An officer moved along the parapet. They scrambled out, formed up, and were quickly lost in the smoke. We turned to our breakfast.

What we saw when the fog gradually cleared must be the matter for another article.

Commonwealth Pensions.

The Deputy Commissioner of Pensions in Adelaide (Mr. J. Gardiner) wrote on March 28th:—"With reference to the paragraph, under the heading of 'Soldiers' Pensions,' on March 21st, the Commissioner of Pensions, Melbourne, explains that reductions of the war pensions of returned incapaci-tated members of the forces are permissible in all cases excepting those which come under the second schedule of the War Pensions Act. This second schedule provides for pensions at fixed rates for life in cases of permanent injuries, such as, for instance, the loss of a leg or foot, hand or arm; the maximum rate for six months, and thereafter threequarters of the maximum rate for life; the loss of one eye, half the maximum rate for life, etc. The rates of pensions of all cases which do not come within the provisions of the second schedule are liable to reduction in accordance with the recovery of the member of the forces, and his consequent capacity for earning a livelihood."

Oath for Students.

At a meeting of the senate of the University of Adelaide, held recently, over which the Warden (Mr. F. Chapple, C.M.G.) presided, the following motion was carried at the instance of Professor Mitchell, seconded by Dr. B. Poulton-" That the following new clause be hereby aded to Chapter 25 of the statutes:-During the continuance of the present war every student of the University shall, as soon as possible, unless exempted by the council, make and sign the following declaration in the presence of the registrar or other duly appointed person:- 'I solemnly and sincerely declare and affirm my absolute allegiance and loyalty to the British Throne and Empire."

The Manufacture of Zinc in Tasmania.

The Electrolytic Company of Australia, which has taken over the contracts and concessions of the Amalgamated Zinc Company, has not lost any time in getting to work. It has been in possession of the land leased from the Tasmanian Government at Risdon for some two months, and for more than a fortnight has been turning out zinc. Ground has been levelled, buildings have been erected, a pier has been built, and machinery brought here and installed. Electric power is laid on by the Hydro-electric Department, and shipments of concentrates have come trom Port Pirie, which are being transformed into metallic zinc, pure to the degree of 99.9 per cent. of its contents. So far this is really on quite a small scale, but work is proceeding apace, and by the beginning of August Mr. Gepp, the general manager, expects to have in going order a plant which will turn out 10 tons of zinc a day. And yet that is only an instalment. It will use 4,000 horse-power, but the company has the right to call up from the department a further 26,000 horse power, and will probably do so by the time it is possible to get the necessary machinery, which is not yet. The Hydro-electric Company still announces its intention of putting up works at North-West Bay-which is in the south-east of the State-to work the Gillies process, and has arranged to get ore from the Jupiter mine, on the West Coast. The Mount Lyell Company has sent its general manager (Mr. Sticht) to America, to decide which process it will use for the Hercules and other Rosebery ores, and yet another company is understood to have a process. So it seems that Tasmania is going to be the home of zinc manufacture.

The Plague of Locusts.

Referring to the existing plague of grasshoppers, Mr. C. J. Boykett (the Secretary to the Acting Railways Commissioner) said that it continued to cause considerable trouble and inconvenience to the railway authorities. In a recent report an officer pointed out that the ashpits were frequently blocked with grasshoppers, and consequently an obnoxious odour arose. Disinfectants had been sent to Paratoo, Yunta, Mannahill, and Olary to minimise the stench. On some parts of the railroad the ground appeared, seen from the engine, to be a moving mass, and unless some climatic disturbance occurred the insects would continue to travel, and the difficulty would probably extend to the Port Pirie line. His informant had intimated that the grasshoppers appeared to have little or no wings, but were moving over the country close to the ground.

Two Crops in a Season.

An unusual and interesting occurrence is reported by the Quirindi correspondent of a Sydney journal, who states that Mr. J. T. Pollock, a farmer in that district, in May, 1916, sowed 40 acres with Warren wheat, which was harvested towards the end of November, before it had been affected much by the storms. The crop was beautifully bright, and showed not the slightest sign of rust. The 40 acres gave an average of nine bags to the acre, the grain being of excellent quality, weighing, without cleaning or grading, 61 lb. to the bushel. When the rains came the self-sown wheat from the harvested crop made rapid growth, and Mr. Pollock recently completed taking off the second crop, which gave an average of four bags to the acre, the weight having been 611 lb. to the bushel, and the sample pronounced by the local millers as superior for milling purposes to the first crop. The second crop was also entirely free from rust.

The A.J.C. committee, after wrestling with the problem of how to build a tote on the flat at Randwick without obstructing the vision of the man with a spy-glass on the stand, has decided to try a long, low building, partly underground.

Marooned.

Some of the Kendall River binghis recently recruited for work on pearling and bêche-de-mer luggars at Thursday Island don't seem to be wildly enthusiastic about the job. One lugger left a few weeks ago with a crew composed of master, mate and four of these natives. Two of the latter shammed sickness and remained on board while the captain, mate and the other two binghis took the dinghy and went on a bêche-de-mer hunt. When the white men were a good distance on the reef the two blacks sneaked to the dinghy, rowed to the lugger, cast away the anchor chain, and sailed for the binghis' Blighty, with the dinghy trailing behind. The marooned white men's only chance to escape starvation was to reach a small island two miles away. They swam the distance and existed on oysters and water for three days, when another lugger hove in sight. They signalled it, but were unobserved, so the master took another plunge and swam six miles out before he was observed and picked up. If the tropical North hadn't impaired his health he would probably have swum on to Thursday and reported the matter to the boss. The stolen lugger was found deserted at Margaret Bay, N.Q. coast .- "Sydney Bulletin."

The Poor Parliamentarian.

Once again we are being invitedsays "The Adelaide Observer"—to pity the poor member of Parliament. At a recent meeting of the Australian Women's Association a proposal was made that all members of the Federal and State Parliaments should be called upon to set an example in economy by contributing portion of their salaries to charity. This proposition (says a Melbourne writer) induced some speakers to state in effect that members of Parliament and their families constituted the most deserving of all charities. The wife of one member said it was with the utmost difficulty she managed to make ends meet, so numerous were the calls upon her husband's salary. Another speaker mentioned the case of a member of the Federal Parliament who gave of his money and goods so generously that lately he had left himself without a hat. On the other hand, it is possible to point to certain members of Parliament-Mr. King O'Malley, for example-who are apparently in a position to afford something unusual and enormous in the way of headgear. "My dad's a member of the Federal Parliament, and we are poorer now than when he was in business," declared one young lady, but, according to the newspaper report, this statement was received with " laughter."

A POLITICIANS' BUTTON DAY.

Perhaps there is some truth in the stories concerning the comparative poverty of Parliamentarians, but it is doubtful if cynical outsiders ever will be induced to believe them so long as members display such an extraordinary desire to retain the positions which are supposed to be reducing them to penury. Anyhow, there are so many calls upon the public at present that a fund for destitute politicians would not be likely to attract many subscribers. Of course, we might hold a Parliamentary Button Day and purchase buttons bearing an inscription to the effect :- " I agree to do my best to help in supporting our brave politicians until the conclusion of the war," but I doubt if even this would be a success. The trouble is that there are traitors inside the Politicians' Union, who every now and then permit the feline to escape from its sack.

Sir George Reid on the Australian Situation.

In an interview published in the "Christian Commonwealth," on the result of the Australian elections and the coalition between Mr. Hughes and Mr. Joseph Cook, Sir George Reid said:—

"I think we have got back in Aus tralia to that sort of progressive, democratic, vigorous politics which will enable the country to work out its best destiny without deflection to selfish ends. The legitimate claims of the trade unions are just as safe in the hands of the new Government as they were in the hands of the Labour Ministry, but the illegitimate claims ought to be rejected."

"You think that the Coalition will hold together?"

"It has better prospects than most coalitions. Mr. Cook and Mr. Hughes, two men of very pronounced views and eager temperament, have occasionally, like most political combatants, said hard things of each other; but their union is justified by the crisis. It is one of the noblest and most patriotic things in the history of the Empire that men like Mr. Asquith and Mr. Bonar Law and Mr. Cook and Mr. Hughes should come together, forget their differences, and unite their efforts to see the war through. My hope is that in all cases these coalitions will continue when the war ends. Peace will bring more difficult problems than any we have known before, and the need for harmony and mutual understanding between political leaders will not be less but more urgent hereafter. While the war goes on we have the guidance of our naval and military authorities and the magnificent courage and devotion of our soldiers and sailors to sustain us. When the conflict is over we must depend entirely upon the resources of our statesmen. For that reason I hope the coalitions will continue, and the our statesmen will work together in the same broad and generous spirit, making use of the men of intellect and experience in all parties and outside party to rebuild civilised society."

How to Change Australian Silver.

Australian soldiers are making the unpleasant discovery that the Commonwealth shilling is only considered to be worth 8d. in certain "profiteering" quarters.

No Australian soldier need repeat this experience. It is a sharp practice so to victimise him. But the remedy lies to the soldier's own hand.

"We have made every possible arrangement," said the manager of the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, 36 and 38 New Broad Street, E.C., "for our troops to change Australian silver or notes at par-a shilling for a shilling, a pound for a pound.

"So anxious are we about our men's money matters, that wherever an Australian soldier goes he need only hand over his money at any bank to receive full face value for it.

"We have undertaken to bear all expense incurred by banks in forwarding Australian money to us which has been exchanged by soldiers at par for English money."

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

Five Australians Receive the V.C.

War Office, June 8.

The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the Victoria Cross to the following Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and Men:—

Capt. James Ernest Newlands, Inf. Bn., Aus. Imp. Force.

For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty, in the face of heavy odds, on three separate occasions.

On the first occasion he organized the attack by his company on a most important objective, and led personally, under heavy fire, a bombing attack. He then rallied his company, which had suffered heavy casualties, and he was one of the first to reach the objective.

On the following night his company, holding the captured position, was heavily counter-attacked. By personal exertion, utter disregard of fire, and judicious use of reserves, he succeeded in dispersing the enemy and regaining the position.

On a subsequent occasion, when the company on his left was overpowered and his own company attacked from the rear, he drove off a combined attack which had developed from these directions.

These attacks were renewed three or four times, and it was Captain Newlands's tenacity and disregard for his own safety that encouraged the men to hold out.

The stand made by this officer was of the

The stand made by this officer was of the greatest importance, and produced farreaching results.

Lt. Frank Hubert McNamara, Aus. Forces, R.F.C.

For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty during an aerial bomb attack upon a hostile construction train, when one of our pilots was forced to land behind the enemy's lines.

Lt. McNamara, observing this pilot's predicament and the fact that hostile eavalry were approaching, descended to his rescue. He did this under heavy rifle fire and in spite of the fact that he himself had been severely wounded in the thigh.

He landed about 200 yards from the damaged machine, the pilot of which climbed on to Lt. McNamara's machine, and an attempt was made to rise. Owing, however, to his disabled leg Lt. McNamara was unable to keep his machine straight, and it turned over. The two officers, having extricated themselves, immediately set fire to the machine and made their way across to the damaged machine, which they succeeded in starting.

ceeded in starting.

Finally Lt. McNamara, although weak from loss of blood, flew this machine back to the aerodrome, a distance of seventy miles, and thus completed his comrade's rescue.

Lt. Charles Pope, late Inf. Bn., Aus. Imp. Force.

For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty when in command of a very important picquet post in the sector held by his battalion, his orders being to hold this post at all costs.

After the picquet post had been heavily attacked, the enemy in greatly superior numbers surrounded the post. Lt. Pope, finding that he was running short of ammunition, sent back for further supplies. But the situation culminated before it could arrive, and in the hope of saving the position, this very gallant officer was seen to charge with his picquet into a superior force, by which it was overpowered.

By his sacrifice Lt. Pope not only inflicted heavy loss on the enemy, but obeyed his order to hold the position to the last. His body, together with those of most of his men, was found in close proximity to 80 enemy dead—a sure proof of the gallant resistance which had been made.

No. 2902 Sgt. John Woods Whittle, Inf. Bn., Aus. Imp. Force.

For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on two occasions.

When in command of a platoon the enemy, under cover of an intense artillery barrage, attacked the small trench he was holding. Owing to weight of numbers the enemy succeeded in entering the trench, and it was owing to Sgt. Whittle personally collecting all available men and charging the enemy that the position was regained.

On a second occasion when the enemy broke through the left of our line Sgt. Whittle's own splendid example was the means of keeping the men well in hand. His platoon were suffering heavy casualties and the enemy endeavoured to bring up a machine-gun to enfilade the position. Grasping the situation he rushed alone across the fire-swept ground and attacked the hostile gun crew with bombs before the gun could be got into action.

the gun could be got into action.

He succeeded in killing the whole crew and in bringing back the machine-gun to

No. 2389 Pte. Jorgan Christian Jensen, Inf. Bn., Aus. Imp. Force.

For most conspicuous bravery and initiative when, with five comrades, he attacked a barricade behind which were about 45 of the enemy and a machine-gun. One of his party shot the gunner, and Pte. Jensen, single-handed, rushed the post and threw in a bomb. He had still a bomb in one hand, but taking another from his pocket with the other hand he drew the pin with his teeth, and by threatening the enemy with two bombs and by telling them that they were surrounded, he induced them to surrender.

Pte. Jensen then sent one of his prisoners to order a neighbouring enemy party to surrender, which they did. This latter party were then fired on in ignorance of their surrender by another party of our troops; whereupon Pte. Jensen, utterly regardless of personal danger, stood on the barricade, waved his helmet, caused firing to cease, and sent his prisoners back to our lines.

Pte, Jensen's conduct throughout was marked by extraordinary bravery and determination.

No. 4195 Pte. Thomas James Bede Kenny, Inf. Bn., Aus. Imp. Force.

For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty, when his platoon was held up by an enemy strong point, and severe casualties prevented progress. Pte. Kenny, under very heavy fire at close range, dashed alone towards the enemy's position, killed one man in advance of the strong point who endeavoured to bar his way. He then bombed the position, captured the gun crew, all of whom he had wounded, killed an officer who showed fight, and seized the gun.

Pte. Kenny's gallant action enabled his platoon to occupy the position, which was of great local importance.

The Pacific Ocean.

Its Vital Import to Australia's Future.

The Pacific is a vast subject. Next, perhaps, to the problem of populating and developing his own Continent, its future is the most vital of all problems facing the Australian. In his book, "The New Pacific: British Policy and German Aims" (Macmillan and Co., 7s. 6d.), with prefaces by Lord Bryce and the Prime Minister of Australia, Mr. C. Brunsdon Fletcher brings this out very clearly. Mr. Fletcher is assistant editor of the "Sydney Morning Herald," and he has had exceptional opportunities of studying the questions discussed in his book. A cardinal point made which the reader should keep in mind is introduced by a quotation of some words of Lord Cromer's written before the war, and a reflection of Mr. Fletcher's own. "Whenever," said Lord Cromer, "any German interest is involved, no moral obstacles will be allowed to stand in the way of furthering German views."

An Important Qualification.

This statement, it should be observed, refers to the policy of the German Government, and not merely to the action of private individuals in their own interest. And in respect of this distinction Mr. Fletcher's remark is of great importance :- "German historians can at any time draw a dark enough picture of British unscrupulousness if they go to the records and exclude altogether the British Government from their summary of any given situation. This is a very important qualification. It is perfectly true that individuals, either singly or as shareholders in companies, have done, or tried to do, things which must now be reprobated, and which during the beginning and middle of the last century called forth much vigorous protest . but, broadly, it is not true that the British Government ever played the game that Germany did in the Pacific and elsewhere. The trouble was that Great Britain declined to act; and she accepted German assurances at face value. When she did act it was always reluctantly, and only when responsible chiefs . united to hand over any sovereignty they possessed to her. There never was any stirring up of strife among nations to give excuse for selling arms and ammunition in exchange for land; but rather it was charged against the mother country that her traders . . . were left in the lurch after they had legitimately prepared the way for her action.'

Australia's Case against Germany.

As Mr. Hughes says in the foreword written by him:-"This is a book of the war, only made possible by Germany's perfidy; and it is substantially Australia's case against Germany. . Germany laid her plans as carefully against Australia as she did against Belgium, against Russia and Servia, and against Great Britain herself in the final cast. It is comparing small things with great, I admit, but Australia became a fine goal for German ambitions in these wide Southern Seas; and while she had a large contempt for Australians, both as to numbers and readiness for war, their continent was necessary in the round of a vast purpose. Holland has always been a German appanage in the eyes of Berlin; Holland's colonies have consequently been marked as German spoil; and what so convenient as Australia, with its temperate and tropical climates, upon which to centre a new Colonial Empire?"

Germany's Idea of "The Open Door."

Mr. Fletcher has collected within this volume all the facts on which the above indictment is based, and every Australian, and particularly every Australian soldier, ought to know them.

He proves that the German policy in the Pacific has been all "take" and no "give," while at the same time the authorities in Berlin were insistent in demanding and obtaining from Great Britain, to the utmost limit, opportunities for themselves on the basis of mutual rights and the policy of the open door for trade. The German view all along has been that islands under their flag or influence should be reserved for Germans, to the practical exclusion of other nations, while those under British or other flags should be open to all.

German Treatment of Natives.

Further, Mr. Fletcher shows us that in those islands where he had got a footing, the German—encouraged by his Government—is nothing but an exploiter of men and produce. The welfare of the native is nothing to him—except as a slave. He has openly fostered intertribal war in aid of the sale of German arms, he has murdered or enslaved the natives as it suited his book, and his only concern in this part of the world has been to promote the ambitious and rapacious plans for the extension of the German Empire.

These plans have not been abandoned, and the German nation still looks confidently forward to the restoration of her lost colonies and its own reinstatement in them as part of the negotiations for peace. That is a question in which every member of the Commonwealth is directly interested and on account of which they should read what the author of this book has to tell them of the past activities of the German Government so close to their own doors.

The French Front.

As Seen by an Australian.

"The Dirty Germans."

By C. E. W. BEAN.

British Headquarters, France,

June 1st.

The French have taken a remarkable interest in Australian and New Zealand troops since they came to France. French and Russian correspondents have constantly visited the front held by the Anzac Corps. And when the French Government recently invited the Australian, New Zealand, Canadian, and South African correspondents to visit the French front, the offer was eagerly accepted as giving us an opportunity of knowing at first hand something about the French.

For in all this tiresome war if there is one subject upon which every Australian officer and man is agreed, and indeed every man in the British armies in France, it is their wholehearted admiration for the manner in which the French army and people have faced this war. Whatever discussions there may ever be round the camp fires as to whether this or that army or people have pulled their full weight in the struggle there is one people as to whom there is not and never will be any doubt -and that is the French. For two years while the British Empire was getting under way, the French sustained enormous losses in holding at bay the great mass of the German power in the west. At the end of it they took the offensive on the Somme when the Germans admit that they thought the French offensive power was ended. And they have managed to comb out of their thinned numbers a sufficient reserve to make two further heavy offensives in the present year.

Last week the four of us—Canadian, New Zealander, South African, and Australian—were allowed to see some of the country in which the French for nearly three years have been fighting the Germans who invaded their land.

In Their Homeland.

The first thing that hits you in this French area of war—the first obvious certain impression—is that none of the rest of us, however hard and willing the fight—have a knowledge of war, the real thing, in the same way as the invaded countries have. We others can argue about the right and wrong of war; there was no argument with the French. They were not asked if they wanted war. The German came in and left them to buy him out of their country or fight him. And now after nearly three years, when they have fought him out of great stretches of it, the German leaves it to them with their fruit trees ring-barked, their houses blown down with gun-cotton charges under the corners, their young girls and women up to middle age carried off; and the children whom Germans have bred during their occupation, hurried off into Germany to be brought up in heaven knows what state orphanage to make the German recruit classes for 1935 and 1936.

The French are noticeably more bitter than the British. It is not uncommon to see the villagers shake their fists at the "dirty Germans," as they call them, 'when German prisoners are marched down the street, and ask why prisoners should be taken at all. One has known a French woman become white and quivering with rage at the mere presence of a newly captured German behind the sentry in the open door of the guardroom. It is curious that the Germans are far more bitter against the British than against the French. It is some of our prisoners whom they are "punishing." Twice in going through villages in which the Germans before their retirement had been facing the French, we saw painted up in large letters on the houses beside the street "Gott Strafe England." The French had blacked one of these notices completely out.

Erasing Traces of Germany.

In the villages and cities which the Germans evacuated or were expelled from in March and April this year the French have carefully wiped out or torn down every trace of them. Three months ago Noyon was full of a busy population of German soldiers and staff officers, and must have swarmed with notices "It is forbidden to ride in this place," "It is forbidden to walk here," and been plastered with proclamations as Bapaume was, demanding the handing over of all metals at a fixed price to be paid in German bonds. It is hard to find a single trace of the German in Noyon to-day. His proclamations have been carefully removed from the walls or covered with French ones; his signboards have been painted out; even the names of his soldiers scrawled in pencil over street walls have been scratched off by shaving the surface of the stone until the last letter has been removed.

The Germans build solid stone memorials to their regiments; and in some places-for example in Bapaume they have had the decency or wisdom to leave the French cemeteries alone. When the Germans retired early in this spring the French soldiers respected these big German memorials, until they came across some of the French monuments shattered and the graves opened and apparently robbed either for the lead in the coffins or for private pillage. At the chateau of Mont Renard the owner was carried off into Germany as a hostage and the coffins in his family graveyard were broken open. It only needed a little of this sort of thing to raise the temper of the French troops whenever they came upon some pompous Prussian monument erected in their country.

A Monument of Germany.

The Germans seem to have treated French cemeteries and shrines as their individual fancy seized them. Often they left them untouched. The graves of German soldiers are found in most French cemeteries or in neat well-kept cemeteries adjoining them. Unless the Germans thought they were going to be in France for ever, ordinary prudence would make them preserve the French cemeteries as well as their own. And yet we were told of places where the hedge of trees had been cut down or dug up from the French cemetery and planted round the German, or French gravestones taken to make a German regimental monument regimental monument.

There is one relic of the Germans which is being preserved with great care in the village of Suzov near Noyon. In the school house of this small French village the Germans had a recreation house or beer house for their soldiers. On the wall of the school room some German artist-a clever artist by his work-has painted a picture of the German as seen by a German. Two German soldier devils are sitting holding each a long peacock's feather on which the Frenchman, Englishman, Belgian, Russian, Italian and Servian and a psalm-singing Scotchman are balancing themselves precariously over the flames of hell. Nothing that was ever said or painted of the Germans was ever half so gross as those two Germans. The fat beer-sodden faces and enormously swollen bodies ending in elephantine legs like those of some foul beast crawling in prehistoric slime make the average visitor almost sick to look at. There was never painted a more bitter cartoon of the Kultur which has ruined Germany.

Disappearing Mailbags.

Police aid has been sought in Sydney by the G.P.O. authorities in the endeavour to discover who has been reponsible for the theft of registered mails posted at Sydney during the past few months. A full bag of registered mail matter disappeared recently, the bag being replaced by a dummy containing old newspapers and a brick. The missing bag, which was sealed at the office at the central railway station, contained among other valuables, £2,000 in notes, which were consigned to two city banks.

Postal officials state that the losses sustained are serious. They say the robberies and tampering with mailbags are due to the sacrifice of efficiency by the engagement of a skeleton staff only to carry out more work than was done before the war.
