When your Health

Trembles in the Balance

SANATOGEN

THE TRUE NERVE-FOOD AND BODY-BUILDER

Turns the Balance in your favour.

It is a trying moment when you suddenly realise that you are not the man you were—that your health has become unsteady, uncertain.

You notice, perhaps, that you are too often tired and dispirited; that you are losing weight; that sleep, appetite, and digestion are gradually getting worse.

Your work deteriorates in volume and quality: you cannot do things with the old zest and energy.

Probably you get the worrying habit or the "grousing" habit, while your eyes and complexion show that the bodily functions are sluggish and irregular.

Anyway, you no longer enjoy life as you should. You have got to pull up and take stock of yourself. Probably Sanatogen will soon put you right: it will certainly be a real help to you.

You know Mr. A. G. Hales, the Australian War Correspondent whose articles in "John Bull" have made such a hit; read what he says about Sanatogen:—

"I find my health benefits by every tin of Sanatogen I take; it revitalises a man, and is not a drug." Let Sanatogen revitalise you—build up your health—invigorate your bodily functions—give you new strength and energy.

Our Booklet tells you all about Sanatogen; send a post-card, mentioning this paper, to the address below.

And try Sanatogen; it costs only a few pence a day, and is certain to benefit you. You cannot realise how good it is until you have tried it, and you cannot try it without realising how good it is!

Boxing.

Melbourne, 28th May.

At Melbourne Stadium, on Saturday night, 11,000 persons attended to witness the lightweight championship of Australia, between Llew Edwards, of England, and Harry Stone, of America. The match is described as a clever and most exciting contest; it went for full twenty rounds and was declared a draw.

Herb McCoy, of Australia, met Matty Smith, of America, at the Brisbane Stadium. After a strenuous fourteen and a half rounds the referee declared McCoy the winner.

The Tasmanian Parliament.

Hobart, 29th May.

For the bye-election in the Tasmanian State Assembly, Staff-Sergeant Foster J. McPhee, Nationalist, and Mr. B. Watkins have been nominated.

Mr. Hughes on Russia.

Melbourne, 29th May.

Mr. Hughes, referring to the Russian position, said: "I regard the situation in Russia with the greatest misgivings. I trust that in her dark hour there will arise a man who shall lead Russia along the road that all democracies, all free peoples, all peoples who wish to remain free will inevitably tread. Russia, calling herself free, seems to hesitate to pay the price of freedom. What Russia needs is a man."

Importation of Luxuries.

Melbourne, 29th May.

The Associated Chambers of Commerce and Manufacturers have nominated Mr. W. J. Gibson, of Victoria, and Mr. T. J. Hitchman, of Sydney, manufacturers, and Mr. Mark Sheldon, of Sydney, and Mr. J. The Storage of Wheat.

Melbourne, 1st June.

The Wheat Storage Commission met on Thursday and considered the question of providing at the earliest storage for the preservation of unexportable wheat by the erection of standardised silos in country centres. It also considered their probable type. Silos with a capacity of about 40,000 bushels are likely to be erected.

Mr. Pearce at the St. George's Banquet.*Jellicoe Remembered.

Melbourne, 1st June.

The annual dinner of the St. George's Society, held in Melbourne on Thursday, was largely attended. The victory of Admiral Jellicoe in the Battle of Jutland was specially commemorated. Mr. Pearce, responding to the toast of "The Navy and Army," said it was the obvious duty of Australia to keep its armies in the field up to full strength till the end of the war. This was not beyond Australia's capacity, and the duty was cast upon Parliament to devise the means. He felt that the Parliament born in a passion of nationalism might be relied on to do this. Australians would show that they possessed the British characteristic to "stick it out" to the end.

Mr. Pearce said the trouble in Australia was that the war had not made its imprint on their lives, owing to the power of the British Navy. He paid a tribute to the Japanese Navy. He said he was sure Parliament could be trusted to do its duty in the matter of keeping the Australian armies at full strength.

"Punishing" Australians!

GERMAN TREATMENT OF OUR COUNTRYMEN.

Deliberate Intentional Starvation.

A Simple Story.

By C. E. W. BEAN.

British Headquarters, France,

May 27.

There have arrived back from the German lines, across many lines of German trenches, two Australians who were captured in the Hindenburg Line after the brave attack of April 11th. That unparalleled adventure of infantry against unbroken wire without artillery came near success. When it failed the Germans captured nearly a thousand Australians, cut off by their machine-guns. They have chosen, in their wisdom, to treat these Australians to intentional "punishment." They are similarly "punishing" British troops. They have these Australians completely at their mercy for the time being—they can starve and illtreat them as much as they like. One can only thank Providence that Australians have a long, long memory; and that Germans may regret for centuries the months when they did their will upon this thousand men.

It is at the end of a long and splendid fight the story begins. The Hindenburg Line was new then—its almost untouched wire was in front of it; and Prince Ruprecht was boasting that his men had been gloriously withdrawn to the comfort of its deep dug-outs—the Germans were not so diffident of the name of it as they have since become. At this early stage it was decided to send a division on a tremendous adventure against an isolated portion of the Hindenburg Line in rear of the Germans fighting the battle of Arras. An Australian division happened to be opposite the point chosen.

In that assault everything on which they relied for success was foiled except the infantry. Against almost all previous experience the infantry got through the mostly undamaged wire, and without artillery took the trench where they had been sent against it. Where the two Australians of this story got through the wire, it was quite unhurt. They filed through a narrow lane left in it by the Germans. Later in the day, when the adventure was over and they were standing in the yard of a German headquarters with seven hundred other Australian prisoners, a big German in a distinguished uniform, who was managing affairs, stood up and harangued them. Half his time he was confusing them with Englishmen, and the other half trying to incite them against the English—apparently under the impression that if he did this sufficiently they would betray their own side and give him information which would enable him to lay German guns on the comrades they had left. "Mad Englishmen—you thought that you could get through our wire. Well, there are plenty of you lying on it now."

End of a Brave Day.

They got through the German wire; they were men from all Australian States. The two who escaped were Western Australians, and both Lewis gunners. The elder man threw a dead German out of a shell hole in the furthest German line and placed his gun there. There was continuous fighting from the first. The Germans were bombing in the trenches, where our flanks were. Their machine-gun fire swept the ground in the Australian rear and no bomb supplies could get through. Our men collected bombs from the dead, and every German bomb they could find. But these ran out, and German bombs fell thicker and thicker amongst men who had nothing at all with which to reply. The retreat began down the trench, with the Germans a couple of bays behind and their bombs falling always amongst the last party. At the tail of the retreat could be heard the voice of an Australian officer about one bay ahead of the Germans. He was saying, "Well, boys, you can't surrender—you must give it a go over the top."

A lot of them did go over the top through that hail of machine-gun bullets. Many an officer and man was seen for the last time scrambling over the dusty red crater-brim to "Try his luck." But as the men issued from the saps the Germans gradually got their machine-guns on the places where the break was taking place, and those crowded along the sap behind saw man after man fall as he cleared it. The Lewis gunner crawling across No-Man's Land with his beloved gun watched the two men crawling ahead of him both killed, and machine-gun bullets tearing up the dust. He dismantled the gun and scattered its parts and tried another road. In the trench behind, German bombs were falling already and men dropping everywhere. Finally they surrendered.

A German stood on the parapet with a revolver, which he pointed at each man and made him put his hands up as he passed. From that moment the hunt for souvenirs began. They were marched by a long communication trench and then out over the open to the rear. A formidable barrage was falling there: It was the barrage of our own guns, which in the last stages opened fire; and it looked as though no man could go through it alive. But they got through it, and not many were hit.

A few last long-range shells fell near them down a country road. The battle faded behind them. The long brave fight was ended. Here is what followed.

The Big German Officer.

They were wheeled up a village street into the yard of a big house. Flash Uhlans on smart horses were quartered in the village, and when the Uhlans had been through them for souvenirs there was not much left worth getting. Some young German officers drove up in motor-cars and the big officer above mentioned came out. The young officers mixed with the men and made themselves as pleasant as they could, talking and asking questions. One Australian put them off somewhat when he answered that our officers had told them that German officers would never ask them any dishonourable question. The big German had a fondness for haranguing. In the intervals of his work he harangued them about the iniquities of England. He delivered to the wounded a lecture on the crimes of Mr. Lloyd George. Meantime the Australians were tearing up their letters and papers—the yard became suddenly littered with torn papers, when the Germans noticed it, and told them that if it continued they would be severely dealt with. They were searched, and told that knives, razors and letters must be given up, but they could keep their watches, money and paybooks. The activity of the Uhlans had long since made both this announcement and the search of doubtful value.

The searching took some hours. They were given a loaf of bread to every five, and coffee was brought in; but few had anything but their helmets to drink it in, and so most had none. They sat in the snow, wet through, till they were turned into a big church. Neither this night nor any other night afterwards were they given a single blanket—so far as the escaped men know they have none yet. They lay in the church for the night. It was snowing.

What they Saw on the March.

Next morning they were called from the church by battalions. The big officer, after another harangue, gave the order to march; and down the road they went between the Uhlans. Some of the wounded were kept behind; but one man shot through the chest, another badly hit through one arm by a bullet which expanded and also through the other wrist, and a third who had his fingers blown off by a bomb, were amongst those who were forced to march.

Seven hundred and fifty-six Australians from all States of the Commonwealth were off into German territory, and it was from this time that the deliberate German policy towards them began to appear. On this, their second day after capture, they were given a loaf of bread between four men and some coffee. They were not told that this was their whole day's ration, but it was. The bread had been too sour for some of them the first day. They were glad to eat it the next.

The road was slushy after snow. They passed a gang of men scraping the mud off it. These wore civilian tweed caps—some had old blue French overcoats. They asked if our men had any bully beef. They were British prisoners. Another gang passed, men in smock frocks harnessed up by ropes to a waggon which they were pulling. These were Russians.

At a siding they were put into cattle-trucks, which were presently hitched up, and jolted along till after dark. Then they detrained and were marched into certain village cellars; at a big house early next day some hundred were picked from them for examination, and these were given a good feed. The rest set out on a new day's march, after being given a third of a loaf and a cup of coffee. This time they were told that it was the day's supply.

German Brutality and French Kindness

They were pinched for hunger by this time. And possibly the villagers on their route could see it. For in every French village through which they passed the villagers came out of the cottages and tried to get a loaf of bread through to them, or at least a drink of water. The Australians were marching roughly in fours, with two closely set lines of guards walking outside them. These men were taken from a resting battalion of a Prussian Guard division, and their orders clearly were to stop any food or drink reaching these famished Australians. As the column reached the village the French inhabitants would throng the streets watching it pass. "The French would give you anything they had," one of the men said. A little girl ran out from a cottage with bread. The guard smacked her in the face—the bread they used to throw into the gutter. A Frenchman tried to give the Australians a bucket of water to drink. The guard upset the water and threw the pail over the man. A woman tried to give them bread. A Prussian soldier hit her in the face and knocked her down. In one place a French priest edged up with a loaf under his arm to pass it to our men. A German soldier was watching him out of the corner of his eye. An old woman, seeing this, tugged the priest back by his clothes—and this sort of scene was repeated until the Australians, however hungry or thirsty, could not bear to bring such treatment on the French for their kindness, but learned to shake their heads when they offered them food or drink.

They were taken to a sort of clearing house for prisoners, where for once they were given something like a meal and a good bath. Two days later they were moved by train to Lille.

Through the chinks in the big cattle trucks they could see that it was a big railway station they were moved into. Then the truck doors opened and they found themselves on the platform. In the roof far above them the glass was partly broken. That was the only sign of the war.

Around the station the roads were full of German soldiers and civilians, as if the town were in holiday to see them arrive. Just outside a woman in the crowd threw a packet of cigarettes, which was caught by an Australian sergeant. One of the guards pointed her out at once to a military policeman, who arrested her and marched her off. The column marched through the streets of the great city—only two houses were noticed to be damaged, though it is but a few miles from the British line, where the Australians once garrisoned it, near Armentières. They swung out of the city and up to an old green fort. There was two-storey brickwork inside, but grass covered all the roof and ramparts. At the gate the Australians were divided off into parties of a hundred and ten in each; and each of these was marched into a separate room in the upper storey.

The Black Hole of Lille.

For five nights and six days a hundred and ten Australians lived in the room where the escaped men were. It was probably the worst experience which Australians have ever experienced at the hands of their fellow men. It is the first time in our country's history that they have ever suffered organised torture. The room was about 50 feet by 20. The floor was tiled. For a few minutes each day the men were allowed into the yard for exercise. Their only convenience for all sanitary purposes was one barrel, which stood in the corner uncovered. The windows had to be shut, for they slept on the tiled floor without a blanket, though snow fell at night, and their food was too little to keep life together. They were given one seventh of a loaf of bread—that is one slice per man—with some fermented mangels each day; with one cup of coffee at night and one at morning. When the man who took the barrel each day downstairs to clean it asked for a glass of water, the guard would not allow it. The cook refused a mark offered for a little bread. They were not once allowed to wash until the last day, when they cleaned up to leave.

A German Lie.

At the end of it a German corporal came into the room. He asked them if they knew what they were there for. They said "No." He said, "You may write and tell your people and your Government all about it—just what has happened—and say that you are here as a punishment. Seven weeks ago the German Government wrote to the British Government about the employment of prisoners near the line, and they have not yet received an answer."

The Australians told him it was a lie—there was not a German prisoner within twenty or thirty kilometres of the line. These men had passed hundreds of times in our back areas, companies of fat, well-clothed, happy-looking Germans twenty miles behind the British line, with Australians and Tommies alike giving them cigarettes, and only the French people, whose homes they have ravaged, showing the least resentment. But they knew their protest could make no difference.

Two hundred and forty of the Australians were sent by train on the sixth day to work on a dump close behind the front. Lord knows what happened to the rest or where they now are. This double company of Australians was put in a farm near a double company of English and Scottish troops, and set to work unloading stores from a broad gauge railway on to a dump. The work was in two shifts—the Australian company in the morning and the British in the evening.

They were Treated Alike.

The Australians were turned out at 4.30 a.m. Coffee at a quarter to five; march to work at a quarter past five. Work on the dump until one o'clock, and then march back. For this day's work they were given a daily ration of one-third of a loaf. This was issued overnight, and some could not resist eating it then and there. At mid-day, when they came back, they were given a stew consisting of horseflesh and a little barley. "We used to count the grains," one man said, "You could count them easily enough."

Living on Grass.

The result was that these Australians were driven to beg their guards to let them cut any sort of grass that could be eaten—dandelions, stinging nettles, and rape such as we feed sheep on. They picked up potato peelings which the Germans threw out. "Potato peelings was my strong suit," one of the Western Australians told me, "until the mob took to it and it ran out."

On this stuff the men became so weak that at the time these men left they were falling ill at the rate of four a day. There was no such thing as light duty for sick men. The men were worked until they had to be sent to hospital. A Western Australian dropped by the roadside. The men were getting swollen legs and faces. In addition, the dump was under our shell fire. When our big gun opened cover, with his rifle and bayonet poking out, while our men worked. One day, on their way to work, they noticed stains of blood up the road and a smashed field gun—that was some consolation.

They noticed the direction from which the shells of that big gun came, and laid their plans. It was difficult, because a New South Welshman had escaped and been recaptured, and the guard had been doubled. But one night the two got clear.

The Escape.

Australians find their way easily. They cut rapidly through the night along the circuit they had planned. Only once, away on the flank, they heard a party of Germans. Shortly before day there was the flash of a man lighting his pipe near by, and the sound of horses and men. They lay up behind a hedge. An action had suddenly burst out ahead of them. German batteries were belting into the dawn, and down from the skies came a British barrage—the edge of it not so far away. They ate their last crust as they lay there. During the day a man walked past so close that they could nearly have touched him.

Well on into the next night they started—this time making for the nearest flare. They worked between the German batteries, across three lines of newly-dug trenches. At the last of these they heard voices. The flares were now bright. The two lay up along the parados—the parapet behind a trench—while a German working party in three small groups filed past along the parapet in front of it. They went so close that if the Germans had looked they could not have missed the two Western Australians.

They were in a country of shell-holes now—never did that desolation seem so like home to any man. A little on their flank was a village against the skyline. They swerved to leave it five hundred yards on one side. Two figures passed in front of them going down a sunken road. By good luck our two crossed it later at a point where the bank was low and dangerous. There were Germans twenty yards on either side of them in plenty, but none just there. Then they almost tumbled into a sap full of Germans, swerved across it; crawled through an unrecognisable desolation which was a road, and up a bank, when there was a flash.

Death or Bacon.

It came from thirty yards ahead. Flares were going up all round them—they were fast losing all idea of their whereabouts. They were ravenous with hunger and thirst. There were dead all round them by the smell, but they could find none. However, in a shell-hole they hit on a German water-bottle full of weak coffee. They drank it. "We will have death or bacon for breakfast," said the elder. They crawled on ten yards. There was another flash and the leader was hit through the shoulder.

There seemed only one thing remaining—to go another thirty yards and then lie up in a shell-hole till they had enough daylight to see. The leading man crawled ten yards, when there was a clear "Halt." The tone was unmistakable. The leading man put his head up. "Are you British," he asked. "Yes," was the answer.

The leader did not wait for ceremony. "Come on, Stewie," he said to his mate, "We are home and dry," and ran without his hands up, and in his French civilian cloth cap, straight into the trench.

It was the biggest risk of the lot. But within half an hour he was having his bacon for breakfast, with margarine and the beloved jam and a tot of rum.

SPORTING NOTES.

Vince Blackburn beat Andy Macguire in twenty rounds at Melbourne Stadium, thus retaining the Bantam Championship, after a splendid match.

Benny Palmer knocked out Matt Murphy, at the Sydney Stadium, in the seventeenth round of a tame contest.

The pugilist voiced what appears to be the general opinion when he said on the peace proposals of the Germans: "When I've got my man beaten, I don't ask them to send the towel in from my corner."

Woorak has now won £16,500 in stakes.

The Totalisator was used for the first time in N.S. Wales on Kembla Grange racecourse. On the first race the dividend on Silientia was 57s. for a 10s. investment, and 7s. 6d. on Father Flint, who ran second in that race. The betting was 7 to 1 against Silientia, and 6 to 4 on Father Flint—to win outright.

GENERAL AUSTRALIAN NEWS

During the recent deluge at Lyndon, near Ilfracombe (C.O. Railway), a record for an inland downpour was established. The gauge registered 17 inches in four hours. Then the pressure in the watering-can eased, and it only leaked four inches in the next 20 hours.

Colonel Price Weir, D.S.O., V.D., A.D.C.

Cheered in Adelaide.

Colonel S. Price Weir, D.S.O., V.D., lately commander of a famous battalion at Pozières, has been appointed, since his return to Australia, an A.D.C. to the Governor-General. In connection with his name the "Adelaide Register" tells a somewhat amusing story.

Mr. Brookfield, M.L.A. for Broken Hill, N.S.W., was passing through Adelaide after his election, and seems to have thought it desirable to explain his position with regard to the I.W.W., the Union Jack, and other matters, to such of the residents as cared to listen to him, in the Botanic Park, on a Sunday afternoon. Part of his speech, says the paper referred to, "was a vigorous attack upon Colonel Weir, D.S.O., who, he said, wanted to lock him up." It is difficult to interpret Mr. Brookfield's curious analogy, but this is what he said:—"A weir is a dam, and a damn is a curse. He is one of those weirs which is a dam of water, and it is getting on to his brain."

"A returned soldier: He is a better man than you. Don't you damn Weir."

"Mr. Brookfield said Colonel Weir had damned him without having heard him."

"A Voice: You deserved it"

"At the instance of a patriotic spectator, three lusty cheers were then given for the hero of Pozières by enthusiastic loyalists."

A Bag-Sewing Record.

Recently Mr. P. J. McEachern, of Coolania, accomplished what is no doubt a record for South Australia. He succeeded in sewing 201 bags of wheat in four hours 27 minutes. He performed the feat with ease. The average number of stitches inserted in each bag was 15, and the twine was securely fastened at the ends. The bags were well dumped and filled, the sewer using two bags of grain to fill the first 100 bags, which were finished in a little under two hours. The same performer threaded his needle, dumped, filled and sewed a bag in 30 seconds.

Employment of Returned Soldiers.

The Queensland Government is building a store at Beerburum, which it is proposed to be placed under the management of returned soldiers, who will supply the wants of their comrades working on the State Training Farm near by. These men are at present gaining a knowledge of agriculture and getting "hardened up" for the working of their own holdings later on. They are paid £2 10s. od. per week, from which the cost of their food is deducted. On the other hand, the Government provides them with bedding and quarters, and they are allowed the use of the utensils, and in addition a cook is employed by the State.

Gypsum Trials at Yanco.

During the past season some experiments in regard to the effect of gypsum have been conducted on the farm of Mr. J. Sippel, Yanco, N.S.W. Sufficient time has, perhaps, not yet elapsed to allow of the full effects of the application of this soil improver manifesting themselves, but enough has been done to demonstrate that the gypsum has had the effect of loosening up and making the land more loamy. Tests have been tried at the rate of 3 tons, 2 tons, and 1 ton to the acre, and so far it appears that the heavier application has given the best results. The untreated land examined, though of good quality, appears to be stiff and dead compared with the three plots to which the gypsum was applied.

Uniform Taxation.

The conference of the Federal and State income tax officers convened in Melbourne for the purpose of devising a scheme for uniform valuations, and generally to link up the work of the Commonwealth and States as to increase efficiency and secure economy, has practically completed its work, and the delegates will shortly be in a position to present a report of the proceedings to their respective Governments. The officials state that the differences between the Acts of the seven authorities operating in the same ambit of taxation presented many problems, but an earnest endeavour has been made to arrive at a system of uniformity which will be acceptable to all, and recommendations in the direction of uniformity will be included in the report.

Molybdenite.

Huge Deposit Near Bathurst.

A molybdenite deposit extending over nearly the whole of 327 acres, possessing an average depth of 27ft., averaging also 1.7 per cent. and valued at millions of pounds, has been found on Mount Tennyson, near Bathurst, New South Wales, and is now being developed.

Molybdenite has been a name to conjure with among geologists and metallurgical chemists for several years, but before long it will have a deep significance for all Australians, because they have in their country the largest deposit of this valuable metal in the world.

In pre-war days Germany monopolised the world's molybdenite production for the alleged purpose of imparting a lovely blue lustre to Dresden china. Not a whisper was heard of their metallurgical chemists' experiments in laboratories and steel works with the soft, flaky, shining material for the hardening of steel. But when the great guns battered Liege, Namur, and Louvain to pieces, British chemists found out that the Huns had been really using molybdenite for a sinister purpose. Now the Allies are taking all the metal that can be produced, and the price paid by the Commonwealth for the local supply is £525 per ton. This is much less than the price in England and America, which is nearly £1,000. What, then, must be said of a proposition which involves the working of a deposit variously estimated at from 10,000,000 to 30,000,000 tons?

The figures look almost incredible, but so did those of Mount Morgan and Broken Hill. The outstanding fact is that they are true.

The world is just awakening to the use of molybdenite, which occurs in two forms in New South Wales—in pipes of limited extent, such as at Kingsgate, near Glen Innes, and in contact deposits, such as those at Yetholme (Mount Tennyson) and Gemalla.

The Mammoth Molybdenite Company, which has acquired large interests at Mount Tennyson, already has 2,500 tons of picked ore in heaps or bagged.

In 1915 the export of molybdenite from New South Wales was only 31½ tons; last year it was about 60 tons. The company is laying four miles of wooden water pipes from Yetholme to its property, and has a bigger and cheap gravitation scheme in hand when more water is necessary.

Australia's Woollen Industry.*Great Activity of the New South Wales Mills Last Year.

The New South Wales woollen mills experienced last year the most active period in their existence. The mills concentrated their whole endeavours in supplying the enormous demand for khaki blankets and underclothing for the forces. Manufacturing was exclusively from cross-bred wools.

The wool topmaking industry experienced a very busy season, and the two mills at Sydney were kept going at full capacity.

Under the Commonwealth Bounties Act of 1907 bounties were payable on combed wool or tops exported from the Commonwealth, provided they were produced therein. The maximum amount of bounty paid may not exceed £10,000 per annum, but any unexpended sum not paid may be carried forward and be available for the following years. In the past five years the bounties earned have amounted to £56,000, and the establishment of the industry has now been placed on such a firm footing that some manufacturers feel quite independent of the payment of future bounties.

A modern carbonising plant for the treatment of inferior wools is now being constructed at Sydney, and this, it is stated, will have a material effect on the values of very faulty wools, the bulk of which were treated, in pre-war times, in Belgium and Germany.

A Sporting Offer!

Mr. Kingsmill, M.L.C., has good news for Western Australian sportsmen, says the "Western Mail." In a few years, he has been telling us, deer-stalking in our forests will become as popular a sport as it was in England in the days of Robin Hood. The horn will be winded in the good old fashion and gay parties of cavaliers and cavalieresses will chase the red (or black) deer in the leafy shades of our eucalyptus timber-lands. It is a romantic and enticing prospect, and the new sport, doubtless, will find many enthusiastic, not to say picturesque exponents.

As a medium for speculation, the horse will soon be dedicated to the tote alone. The black-deer will fill the vacancy in splendid fashion. It requires little imagination to picture the vigorous betting that must arise over the question as to whether the last-slaughtered animal is a spayad, a stag-gard, or a stag, or just a broket's sister. And sartorially, the chase offers tremendous decorative possibilities. Picture the outfit! The broad hat with waving plume, the jerkin, gloves with gauntlets, the wide belt, the hunting-knife, the long boots, and spurs! A gay hunting-party, with its attendant posse of bookmakers, would excite deeper emotions than a circus procession.

Suicide at Katanning.

Robert Edward Sievier, of Katanning, W.A., aged 45, who had been missing for several days, was found hanging to a limb of a tree, about one mile from the town. Mr. Harry Barrett, who found the body, informed the police, who brought the remains to the morgue. The police found a letter, written by the deceased, at his residence, saying, "Good-bye to all."

To the Soldiers of Australia.*Cable from the Prime Minister.

On behalf of the National Party, I desire most heartily to thank Anzacs for the magnificent support accorded to them by the Australian Forces.

Soldiers, by your votes you have turned the scales of victory in many electorates, stamping the great triumph for Australian Nationalists with the imprimatur of the men who are fighting and dying for the great cause for which the Nationalist Party stands. You have placed the destinies of Australia in the hands of the Nationalist Party. They will not fail you. Since both the people and the soldiers of Australia have shown themselves by their votes united in the determination to prosecute this war to decisive victory, we can now say with positive assurance that "Australia will be there."

W. M. HUGHES.

Fatal Gun Accident.*Youth Killed at Day Dawn.

A fatal accident occurred on April 1st to Alfred Chesson, aged 19 years, an employee of the telegraph service, and eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Chesson, of Day Dawn, Westralia. Father and son were out shooting, and were on the home trip, when the youth got out of the sulky to shoot plovers. He had just got back into the vehicle with a loaded gun, when it is supposed that the trigger, which was at safety, caught in the rug. The charge exploded, and entered his head, death being instantaneous.

Repatriation Gifts.

The mail from Queensland gives the following details of the gift of 7,075 acres of land for repatriation purposes, made by the Moore family, of the Burnett district, as mentioned by cable in our issue of April 18th, and also of the gift of £10,000 by Mr. William Naughton:—

The land has been given for the benefit of returned soldiers, either for the purposes of settlement, or, if found unsuitable, the land may be sold and the proceeds devoted for their benefit. The property is within six miles of Bundaberg. It is well watered, and a portion of it is very suitable for fruit-growing and dairying purposes. Part of the land is a fine seaside resort. The deeds of the property have been handed over to the Minister for Lands (Mr. Hunter), as Chairman of the Queensland War Council, under which the Repatriation Fund is administered. Mr. Hunter has received another generous gift from Mr. William Naughton, of Emerald. Some time ago that gentleman offered to contribute a sum of £10,000 over a period of three years, making a proviso that the money should be invested in a way named by him and managed by him under the control of the War Council, and that it should be free from State and Federal income taxes. To these conditions the War Council has agreed. Mr. Hunter has now received a cheque for £2,045, being Mr. Naughton's first contribution, with an intimation that the second contribution would be handed in at an early date.

Spa Treatment at Home.

For all practical purposes, the German spas—at which so many real and imaginary sufferers from gout or rheumatism were wont, before the war, to take an annual "cure"—have been crossed off the map. So far, at any rate, as gouty or rheumatic subjects who are also British subjects are concerned, it may fairly be assumed that they will continue to prefer to take their medicine at home—either at one of the British spas, if they have time and money to afford it, or by taking, say, the "Kruschen" course at their own convenience in the privacy of their homes. After the experiences of the war, self-discipline may perhaps be counted upon to replace the martinet-like methods of the German doctor—discipline of some kind being, it must be admitted, part and parcel of the "cure."

The Gallipoli Hand.

At the Old Game. A Place of the Dead.

By C. E. W. BEAN.

British Headquarters, France,
June 1st.

It was on the second day after a heavy fight. Two mornings before, in the dawn, after drenching the Hindenburg trenches, with trench mortar bombs and artillery throughout the night, the Germans had made their carefully prepared attack with the Lehr Regiment and special assault troops against our holding in their line. The officer commanding the Australian battalion which drove them out of its trenches was an old Gallipoli hand—one who had lived for months together like a hermit in a little dry clay dug-out in the side of a deep red sap and sniped Turks daily, as a good light horseman should, where their buff skull-caps could be seen creeping through the holly scrub on the slopes toward Gaba Tepe. This was his first big fight in France; his battalion had been through one tremendous night's work, but that was before he came over to command.

He had always a good yarn to spin in the old days, so a couple of us went to find him. At the tiny hole in the ground which formed his headquarters they told us he was up in the line. We threaded our way up the long shell-pounded dusty way, with its ghastly relics of a fortnight's hard fighting, through the remains of the Hindenburg wire, battered down much as a wheat-field is battered by a hurricane; worked up the dusty old ploughed field of the great trench itself—both sides were in it time and again in the early days of the attack until it was little more than traceable in parts—running like the old dry bed of some droughty watercourse amongst the shellholes.

The Sniper.

On our way to find the colonel we came on a little group of men in dusty war-worn clothes lining a rather wider shellhole than most. We had heard the crack of a rifle as we came up the trench. There was an occasional distant peck from the Germans, and once or twice a rapid succession of shots from near by. Evidently some Australian sniper was having good shooting. The report of a rifle, which used to be continuous day and night in Gallipoli, is almost an event of itself in France; if you hear half as many reports of a rifle as you do of an eight-inch howitzer it is time to ask what is causing the disturbance.

We came round a corner of the trench on to this group in the shellhole, from which the activity clearly proceeded. Two men seemed to be shooting over the top. Two others were observing. Out in the dry shell-pitted slope seven or eight hundred yards away from them, which formed the opposite incline of a shallow spoon-like valley, a couple of Germans were hopping from shellhole to shellhole across what once had been a wheat-field. They would disappear from sight for a time, apparently in a trench along a road, but always reappeared where our shells had broken the trench down. These Germans were trying to conduct a relief by daylight, and it had to cross this precarious area before it reached the white chalk parapet of a further trench where the country was still green.

One of the men in the shellhole fired twice quickly. The hurrying Germans nipped down into some crater. The Australian rested his rifle on the bank in front of him and looked round.

It was our old friend of Gallipoli.

"My word," he said, "it's the best shooting I have ever had. We are touching the beggars up. Sometimes they have the hide to try and cross the open—that's when we have some fun."

There came an excited yelp from the man leaning beside him.

"Dere dey goes—oh, Colonel, queeck, queeck—now by de white trench, queeck." It was a French or Russian Australian who was lying by the colonel's side observing for him—as keen as a greyhound in the leash.

The Gallipoli hermit let off a clip of five cartridges as fast as he could fire—they noticed the dust flick once or twice near the hurrying figures before they dived into shelter again. Then the colonel put down his rifle and turned to talk. Once or twice an answering bullet from some German away in that pink hillside ricocheted off a lump of earth somewhere in the foreground and went singing far overhead. It might have been a day at Anzac.

The Corner of Death.

He had a place he wanted to take us to, this colonel, "Awfully-interesting," he said, "I was there yesterday. You ought to see it."

And so he took us. The Germans and ourselves occupy the same trench in the Hindenburg Line. Our troops seized a section of it on May 3rd; the Germans remained in the adjoining section, and ever since they had fought up and down it. We had barricades at the end of our portion of the trenches; and the Germans had barricades in their trenches about thirty yards further on; and there was thirty yards of abandoned trench in between.

It was into this section that he took us; out over our barricade into the dry winding crumbled trench where no one lived. The mid-day heat trembled on the dry pink clods around; the green flies moved here and there over the pin crater sides. Except for that we might have been in mid-Sahara.

The fight had been tremendously heavy in that corner two mornings before. The Germans had attacked, and in that region the last remnant of the attack had been wiped out. On the bottom of the trench lay four Germans, the red facings on their grey uniforms as bright and their colour as clear as if they had lain down there to rest. The trench was littered with the debris of battle—old waterbottles, bombs, odds and ends of kit. At one point there stood up against the trench wall, exactly as they were left when the owners were killed or wounded, the rifles of some small Australian outpost that had once held the trench some way in advance of our final position.

Once while we stood there the noise of hammering came from not far away. Someone was tacking up a notice-board on the entrance of a dug-out, or driving a stake in the trench side. The sound came from beyond us. It was the Germans at work in their trench.

The Trans-Australian Railway.

Owing to the impossibility of obtaining rails, platelaying on both the eastern and western sections of the trans-Australian railway was suspended for some time. The Minister for Works and Railways (Mr. Watt) has stated that rails were available at Newcastle, but he had been unable to obtain ships to carry them to Port Augusta and Fremantle. He had asked if ships could not be supplied to carry two cargoes, representing in all 8,000 tons.

A Generous Gift.

A resident of Kalgoorlie, who does not wish his name mentioned, has given a four-roomed house and two acres of land, value at £150, for the use of any returned soldier that may be selected by the Mayor, who will act as trustee of the property.

NEWS BY CABLE—Continued.

King's Birthday Celebration.

"Melbourne, 4th June.

The King's birthday was to-day loyally honoured throughout the Commonwealth.

Repatriation meetings and recruiting appeals were held throughout the States, and the Stars and Stripes were much in evidence at various patriotic gatherings.

At a recruiting meeting held outside the Melbourne Town Hall the crowd refused to listen to Mr. Tudor, the leader of the Opposition Party in the Federal House of Representatives and late Commonwealth Labour Minister of Customs.

Censorship in Australia.

Sydney, 31st May.

At a luncheon at the Journalists' Institute, Judge Ferguson pleaded that the censorship should be modified in order to permit people to know more about the war. Its operation had caused Australians hopelessly to misjudge the situation, and accounted for the stagnation of recruiting. General Legge expressed surprise to find that practically peace conditions still existed in Australia.

GENERAL CABLES.

The Anzac Buffet Fund has reached £3,000; War Savings Certificates to the value of nearly £400,000 have been subscribed in two months. The £100 certificates were the most popular.

The price of milk has been fixed at 5½d. per quart; of butter, wholesale, choicest at 1s. 5d. per lb., second grade 1s., third grade 1s. 1d.; prices are retail 2d. higher.

The Board of Directors of the Australian Natives' Association has resolved to impose a levy of a penny a week on each member, to keep the names of active service members on their books.

Mr. David Blanshard has decided to contest Darwin, Tasmania, for the Federal Parliament in the Nationalist interest. He claims the support of Liberals on the ground that he retired in favour of the late Mr. Howroyd.

Mr. Beeby, Minister for Labour in New South Wales, is moving for the cancellation of the awards in the applications of the Employees' Union of the Australian meat industry, as the result of unreasonable strikes.

LATEST SPORTING NEWS BY CABLE.

The result of the Adelaide Birthday Cup was: Goldcuffs 1, Glad Eye 2, Dividends 43s., 41s.

Fritz Holland knocked out Jack Cole, at Sydney Stadium, in the tenth round, after a hard-hitting fight.

The Australian Jockey Club has so far made donations amounting to £50,000 for patriotic purposes.

Herb McCoy, lightweight, knocked out Jimmy Hill at the Brisbane Stadium, on Saturday, June 2nd, and won his hundredth fight.

George Taylor gained the Victorian Featherweight Championship by defeating Bert Spargo at Melbourne Stadium, on Saturday, June 2nd. Spargo has shown evidence in the last few fights that he is growing stale. His friends advise a spell. Taylor won in the last few rounds on points.

Australian Red Cross Work in France.

The April report of the Australian Red Cross in France records another busy month.

Exclusive of newspapers, 2,622 packages have been handled at Boulogne alone. Consequent upon the heavy fighting the issues have been large in all lines.

Special attention has been paid to stretcher-bearers, whilst on duty, and during their brief periods of well-earned rest.

In consequence of the advance of our troops our dépôt has been moved forward from Amiens to Albert.

All the field hospitals have had attention, and the volume, quality, and promptness of supplies has been eulogised by several officers.

The Albert Dépôt has been very active, but all requisitions were satisfied.

In the Hazebrouck area the issues have been somewhat reduced.

At Rouen the Australian Hospital has had the customary attention, and the Convalescent Camps were regularly supplied.

Havre has been busier than usual, and ample comforts have been distributed.

Our French Ally has shared in the generosity of the Australian public. We are now represented at the Entrepot des Dons, Paris, alongside Canadian and other kindred societies. This branch of the Service de Sante was founded by the French Government with a view to organise and co-ordinate the efforts of those who are helping France.
